International Labour and Employment Relations Association

The International Industrial Relations Association (IIRA) was established in 1966 in response to a growing need to develop and exchange knowledge in industrial relations at the international level, providing academics and practitioners with a forum for discussion and research. Its founding members were the British Universities Industrial Relations Association, the Industrial Relations Research Association (USA), the International Institute for Labour Studies (Geneva, Switzerland) and the Japan Institute of Labour. In 2010, it was decided to change its name to International Labour and Employment Relations Association (ILERA), in order to better reflect the range of subjects and scope of analysis covered at ILERA congresses. The aims of ILERA are of a purely scientific character, without regard to political, philosophic or religious considerations. The Association does not endorse opinions on policy questions.

The general purpose of ILERA is to promote the study of industrial and employment relations throughout the world in the relevant academic disciplines, by such means as:

- encouraging the establishment and development of national associations of industrial relations specialists;

- facilitating the spread of information about significant developments in research and education in the field of industrial and employment relations;

- organizing worldwide and regional congresses and publishing their proceedings;

- promoting internationally planned research, by such means as organising study groups on particular topics.

Organs of ILERA

The Council of ILERA is composed of the representatives of the national associations (full members) of ILERA; each national association has one vote. The Council elects the President and the members of the ILERA Executive Committee. The Council meets once every three years, on the occasion of the ILERA World Congress, and gives the Executive Committee such general guidance or instructions as it deems appropriate.

The Executive Committee is limited to a maximum of 15 persons, including ex officio, the President, his/her immediate predecessor, the President-elect and the Secretary of ILERA. It is responsible for determining the programme of the Association. Its term of office is 3 years and members can be re-elected for a further 3-year period.

ILERA Membership

There are three categories of members of ILERA namely, full member (or national member), institutional associate member, individual associate member.

Full Membership

Full membership is open to:

- national or regional industrial relations associations, the primary purpose of which is the advancement of knowledge and research in the industrial relations field;
- national or regional committees where such associations do not exist.

The current annual dues for full members are as follows:

USD 40.00 for associations with up to 25 members

USD 65.00 for associations with 26 to 100 members

USD 100.00 for associations with over 100 members

Institutional associate membership

Institutional associate membership is open to universities and colleges or departments thereof and other research institutes concerned with the scholarly study of industrial relations. Annual dues: USD 60.00.

Individual associate membership

Individual associate membership is open to persons engaged in industrial relations research or teaching activities in academic or research institutions, as well as practitioners in the industrial relations field. Annual dues: USD 25.00.

ILERA Electronic Newsletter and Membership Directory

The ILERA Electronic Newsletter is published at least twice per year, and includes news about ILERA activities, activities of members, forthcoming meetings, ongoing research projects, recent publications, book notes, etc. The Newsletter, as well as individual announcements, are sent by e-mail to all ILERA members.

The ILERA Membership Directory is available online with a username and is password protected. It contains the names and addresses of all members, as well as information on their professional activities, publications and research and can be updated by members directly online.
