Youth Employment at ECOSOC High Level Segment

Opening the ECOSOC High Level Segment on 3 July in Geneva, UN Deputy Secretary General Mark Malloch-Brown highlighted youth employment. "Youth unemployment has many faces...yet, common to them all are: adapting to a global economy and dramatic pace of change, employment oriented growth strategies, training and education, and, above all, new job creation." Malloch-Brown advocated a multi-pronged approach to address the differing situations faced by youth seeking employment: support for youth entrepreneurship, training and education, and the inclusion of vulnerable groups in employment strategies. He also stressed the importance of leadership from the ECOSOC delegates: "The UN System is working with member states to address this challenge through the Secretary-General's Youth Employment Network...the issue is one where ECOSOC can provide crucial leadership; it can guide policy, influence action and oversee implementation."

Finnish Minister of Labour Tarja Filatov also highlighted the necessity of confronting the youth employment issue. Mr. Filatov noted that youth integration into the labour market was a "priority challenge," and expressed support for the YEN's employment strategy: employability, equal opportunities, entrepreneurship, and employment creation. He also referenced his country's strong support for the YEN.

The YEN's Youth Consultative Group (YCG) organized a workshop on youth employment as part of the Civil Society Forum to the ECOSOC Summit, held in Geneva on 29-30 June. The workshop, attended by organizations including the Arab Scout Bureau, Forca Sindical Brazil, Pax Romana and a representative of the Swiss Development Group, saw presentations from policy and practice that reflected the challenges of successful youth employment policy and its implementation.

Hany Abdul Monem from the Arab Scout Bureau shared the positive progress made towards youth participation in the formation of a National Action Plan in Egypt; other representatives emphasized the need to learn from unsuccessful policies of the past. The discussion culminated with a series of recommendations formulated by participants and aimed at addressing the youth employment challenge.

The United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) hosted a roundtable breakfast on 4 July to discuss youth employment in West Africa. Discussions emphasized the role of cooperation amongst international organizations. Representatives from Sweden, the UK, the World Bank and the private sector stated their support for the YEN and the planned establishment of a YEN Secretariat/UNOWA Youth Employment Unit in West Africa, to be placed in Dakar, Senegal. Swedish and UK political and financial support has been key to operationalizing the recommendations of

“Regional Security and Youth Unemployment” (UNOWA Report, December 2005.)

Sweden renews its support to the YEN Secretariat

The Government of Sweden has renewed its support to the YEN Secretariat through the provision of a funding package, three years after providing initial seed funding to the start up of the YEN. This three year support will allow the YEN Secretariat fulfilment of its continued mandate to create opportunities for decent and productive employment for youth and to respond to requests by constituents and partners in the field, the YEN’s High-Level Panel, the Youth Consultative Group, and the donor community.

The new project, “Promoting decent and productive work for young women and men through support to the Youth Employment Network Secretariat,” includes two major components. One is support to Lead Countries in developing National Action Plans on Youth Employment. The other is the support of the YEN /UNOWA unit for youth employment and regional security in West Africa. The project will be implemented by the YEN Secretariat, its core partners- the ILO, the World Bank, and the UN-, the Youth Consultative Group, youth organizations and other partners of the YEN.

UN Youth Leadership Summit advocates sport and youth employment links

Young leaders from across the European Union stressed the relationship between sports and youth employment in the ‘Vienna Declaration,’ a series of commitments released at the close of the UN Youth Leadership Summit, held on 19-21 June in Vienna. The event, organized with the help of the entire UN System, was attended by two youth leaders from the 27 countries of the European Union. The leaders ‘encouraged the use of Physical Education (PE) in schools to nurture and inspire employable skills and hence the personal development of youth.’ The final report also included support for entrepreneurial initiatives from state and national governments, as well as a call to governments to back youth employment initiatives through networking with youth NGOs.

The summit was the fourth in the series of regional summits, following Asia and the Pacific, Africa, and Latin America and the Caribbean. A culminating, first ever Global Youth Summit will be held in New York on 30 October-1 November 2006.

UNDP releases report on Arab Youth Development

“Arab Youth Strategising for the Millennium Development Goals \(MDGs\)” is based on three workshops devoted to the impact of globalisation on Arab youth. These workshops were organized by the UNDP’s Regional Bureau for Arab States (UNDP/RBAS) in collaboration with UNDESA. The report offers suggestions to increase youth employment and places an emphasis on effective governance as a ‘necessary pillar of the development process.’ It also provides recommendations on youth participation in policy creation.

Expert Group Meeting held on developmental challenges for youth in Asia

Organized by UNDESA, this Expert Group Meeting was held in Bangkok from March 28 to 30 as a preparation to the publication of the 2007 World Youth Report. Representatives from UN Agencies and member countries as well as intergovernmental organizations and academia attended. Four topics were identified as central issues for youth in Asia: globalisation, urbanization, education, and information and communication technologies. Presentations on globalisation highlighted the issue of youth relocating from their home nations to find work; similar concerns were expressed in the debate on urbanization, where trends show increasing numbers of youth seeking employment in cities. Strategies to address these issues, as well as the employment issue as a whole in Asia, were discussed. The need to create job opportunities for rural youth, following examples of best practice from rural youth organizations and regional agencies, was emphasized.

Briefing the development community on the World Development Report

The World Bank, in collaboration with the YEN, co-hosted a seminar at ILO headquarters in Geneva to share some of the themes of the upcoming "World Development Report 2007: Development and the Next Generation." Citing the significance of current world demographic trends, as well as the importance of providing a smooth transition for youth into the labour market, the Bank has dedicated the theme of next year's report to youth.

As this briefing the chief author of the report, Manuel Jimenez, stressed the necessity of youth participation at all stages of policy development, stating examples of good practice as well as the need for encouragement to involve youth in this process. Jimenez also emphasized the importance of ongoing collaboration amongst youth organizations. The WDR will include a section on 'entering the labour market.'

Following this presentation José Manuel Salazar-Xirinachs, Executive Director of the ILOs Employment Sector, chaired a lively discussion involving discussants including Azita Berar-Awad of the ILO, Diane Widdus of UNICEF, and Jenny Aris of the YMCA

New World Bank fund launched focusing on capacity building youth organizations

In line with the conviction that young people represent a powerful force for change and that they need to be empowered to participate actively in development the World Bank has launched a Trust Fund which will support training and capacity building activities to strengthen youth organisations to become actively involved in decision-making processes affecting their lives.

The first tranche of this multilateral trust fund has been financed by the German Government. The trust funds' activities will start in selected countries shortly after the launch of the WDR 07 and will comprise:

- A mapping of projects and activities supporting youth development being carried out by youth groups and donor organisations
- A needs assessment of youth organisations based from this mapping
- Customized design and implementation of training and capacity building activities

- Sharing of experiences on a regional basis

ILO publishes new study on youth entrepreneurship

The study entitled 'Stimulating Youth Entrepreneurship: Barriers and Incentives to Enterprise Start-ups by Young People', written by Dr. Ulrich Schoof of the Bertelsmann Foundation's Economic and Social Affairs program, publishes data from surveys with young entrepreneurs around the world. A Small Enterprise Development (SEED) working paper, it establishes five priority areas for entrepreneurial engagement:

- (i). Social & cultural attitudes towards youth entrepreneurship,

News from Lead Countries

Azerbaijan

The Ministry of Labour in collaboration with government and workers and employers organizations is developing a National Employment Programme (NEP) to serve as an operational tool of the National Employment Strategy (NES), developed last year. The ILO Sub-Regional Office based in Moscow is supporting these programmes in addition to specific activities on youth employment, including labour force and school-to-work transition surveys, entrepreneurial and modular skills training, and other activities that implement labour-intensive strategies. Azerbaijan has also committed to formulate a National Action Plan on youth employment to serve as an integral part of its overall NES.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

The ILO, the UN and the World Bank are developing a joint project on youth employment to provide support to the Ministry of Labor in developing a National Action Plan on Youth Employment (NAP). A youth coalition, led by YWCA National President Alice Mirimo, has pledged its active support to the NAP process. The coalition is currently sensitizing national stakeholders to the need for urgent action on youth employment.

The coalition reaches out to youth via print and radio media, seminars, and through a recent survey on employment.

Egypt

Following the creation of a National Action Plan Steering Committee (NAP-SC) as the inter-institutional mechanism to supervise the drafting and implementation of the NAP in May strong progress continues to be made. Under the leadership of the Ministry of Migration and Manpower (MOMM) a smaller working level inter-ministerial Technical Commission (NAP-TC) was formed in June with the responsibility of drafting the NAP, in consultation with and for submission to the NAP-SC.

Furthermore a NAP Secretariat has been formed within MOMM as a coordinating body for the NAP.

The NAP process continues to be supported by the YEN Secretariat, as well as strong technical assistance coming from the ILO and active participation from the World Bank, UNDP and UNICEF. GTZ and other bilateral partners including USAID and CIDA are also engaged in developments as well as the social partners and youth organisations.

Senegal

A revised version of Senegal's NAP, or Plan d'Actions National pour l'Emploi des Jeunes (PANEJ), is currently being evaluated. A revised version will be finalized during the next two months through consultations with relevant stakeholders including youth. The development of the PANEJ is a part of the BMZ (German Government) funded project, 'Support for lead countries of the Youth Employment Network,' which is also active in Sri Lanka. The YEN Secretariat is coordinating the project, which is being implemented by the ILO and the World Bank, in collaboration with national stakeholders in Senegal. The objective is to promote decent work for young women and young men in Senegal through assistance in the finalization of the National Action Plan on youth employment, stocktaking and knowledge management, networking and exchange of ideas and experiences, and dissemination and capacity building, especially of youth organizations.

Sri Lanka

Sri Lanka is in the final stages of developing its NAP. NAP formulation has been a thorough undertaking, including the production of 13 issue papers, discussion with constituents and working groups, and the establishment of a YEN-Sri Lanka Task Force (YEN-SL) uniting government, youth organizations, trade unions, and representatives from the ILO and the World Bank. The YEN-SL is also conducting consultations with youth. The process will culminate with the NAP's submission to parliament next month.

United Kingdom

The UK Department of Work and Pensions is working alongside the governments of Ghana and the Netherlands to establish a vocational skills training center in Tema, Ghana by the end of this year. The Ghana Industrial Skills Training Center will provide vocational training to men and women seeking jobs in the industrial sector, as well as opportunities for young entrepreneurs working in the informal sector to gain technical skills. The center is also being supported by the Business Action for Africa network. This network was founded out of the Blair Commission for Africa through decisions made at the 2005 Gleneagles G8 Summit, and is supported by multi-national companies and local businesses.

At a UK Ministerial visit to Ghana in July, the Ministers discussed the possibility of Ghana joining the YEN as a Lead Country, as well as the development of the planned YEN/UNOWA Youth Employment Unit and the Tema skills centre.

A new White Paper by the UK Government's Department for International Development references youth employment in its forward by UK Development Cooperation Minister Hillary Brown.

'A generation of teenagers is entering the workforce in developing economies. By 2010, 733 million more people will be of working age, compared to 50 million more in the rich world. Many of them will migrate - internally and abroad - in search of a better life. But, by 2030, two billion people could also be living in slums without access to healthcare, education or sanitation. If ways of earning a living aren't available to help this new generation to realise their dreams, then their bitterness and anger at a world that has let them down could lead instead to political instability and radicalization.'

YEN Secretariat researches barriers to entrepreneurship in West Africa

The YEN is researching the barriers and constraints impeding young people from starting and running businesses in West Africa, focussing in particular on Ghana, Mali, Nigeria and Senegal building on using previous work undertaken by the ILO (see pg. 4, 'study on youth entrepreneurship.')

The body of evidence will be used by the new YEN/UNOWA youth employment unit for West Africa (see pg. 2).

This Unit would look to build on these research findings when engaging with policy makers in these four countries and beyond in the sub region to develop crucial responses to the problems that hinder entrepreneurial engagement by youth.

A questionnaire has been developed to elicit responses from youth entrepreneurs and organisations serving young entrepreneurs. We encourage these organizations in the countries listed above to kindly distribute this questionnaire to help assist in the YEN's research.
