ABSTRACT

This guide assists policy makers in making informed judgments to whether and how they can pursue the development of a national qualifications framework (NQF) in meeting the specific needs of the training systems. It also highlights that while an NQF can be a useful tool in addressing a number of the skills challenges, there is no single or universal form of NQF which can solve all skills problems. Its implementation needs to be fit-for-purpose with clear objectives in mind.

ABSTRACT

While the task of evaluating progress in gender equality poses many challenges, there is no doubt that there have been significant improvements in the social and economic status of women. One of the most outstanding developments of the past decade is the growing presence of women in the public sphere - whether as political actions in national legislatures, civil society organizations and social movements, or as economic agents increasingly visible in the paid workforce and in migrant streams.

ABSTRACT

The second Philippines progress report on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) shows the determination of the Philippine Government and other key stakeholders to achieve the MDGs in the Philippines. The report identifies six cross-cutting issues and concerns: reducing disparities across regions, increasing resources for MDG-related programs and projects, enforcing stricter implementation of laws and passing of MDG-supportive bills, strengthening monitoring and implementation, scaling up localization efforts, and developing an advocacy plan.

ABSTRACT

This issue of Labour Education, to which eminent lawyers have contributed, does not really set out to relate the history of labour law, but rather to stimulate some reflection on its possible role in the globalized world of today. At the same time, some developments were reported which suggest that labour law has been drifting away from its basic principle of protecting the weaker party within an unequal contractual relationship.

ABSTRACT

The global HIV/AIDS epidemic is an emerging crisis in the South-East Asia and Pacific subregion, and over the long term could present an obstacle to achieving each of the ILO's strategic objectives. The decent work agenda provides a strategic framework for tackling HIV/AIDS. Programmes to achieve the strategic objectives in employment, social protection, rights and social dialogue also help mitigate the spread and impact of AIDS in the world of work.

ABSTRACT

This paper has argued that globalization has not transformed the economic prospects of small island states, in part of their special situation in the global economy. The recent economic record of the Pacific Islands is poor except in Fiji, Samoa and Tonga.

Globalization is encouraging labour migration from some, though not all, Pacific Island states, a number which now depend heavily on remittances for export income.

ABSTRACT

The Global Gender Gap Report 2006 contains a unique new methodology to capture the size of the gap between women and men in four critical areas: economic participation and opportunity, educational attainment, health and survival, and political empowerment.

The Gender Gap Index 2006 covers 115 countries, representing over 90 percent of the world's population. The country comparisons are meant to serve a dual purpose: as a benchmark to identify existing strengths and weaknesses; and as a useful guide for policy, based on learning from the experiences of those countries that have had greater success in promoting the equality of women and men.

ABSTRACT

In the Philippine political context, the Barangay is at the forefront of meeting community-level targets. This guidebook takes the localization process closer to the communities where citizens participate most meaningfully in local governance.

This manual was developed based on the Butuan City experience. The process was undertaken in 63 of the 86 barangays in the city. The rigors of the detailed step-by-step and illustrative documentation, rooted in actual experience, resulted in this manual that is comprehensive in scope and easy to understand and follow, supported with specific tools and examples.

ABSTRACT

National skill standards play an important and increasing role in vocational training and recognition in the Asia-Pacific region as they do in many other parts of the world. They are a guide to the scope of skills and knowledge required for a whole industry and can be flexibly combined into jobs or occupations. Skill standards are now the common basis for vocational training programmes, and testing and certification in many countries.

This guideline is for development of regional model competency standards that can be used in various ways to underpin efficient and effective skill development in the Asia-Pacific region.

ABSTRACT
This paper provides an overview of the data and methodology used to produce the series of harmonized country-level labour force participation rates and economically active population estimates presented in the 4th edition Key Indicators of the Labour Market (KILM) database. It addresses the problem of missing data in cross-country labour force participation databases and documents a model developed to produce estimates of labour force participation rates in countries for which reported data do not currently exist.

ABSTRACT

This publication contains the documentation of the processes involved in producing versions of a local legislation which can be used as a guide by local government units in adopting measures that can bring into effect the much-desired enhancement of basic services for the sector. It reflects some of the experiential learnings of partners with the intent of providing decent work for domestic workers and it picks up good practices from existing, yet earlier undocumented initiatives for the sector.

ABSTRACT

Child trafficking is essentially seen as a labour phenomenon which has relationships to migration. The decision for a child to leave home to work, wilful or not, made by him or for him by his parents, is affected by individual, familial and community factors. Poverty is the most common push factor to this decision.

The study sought to review current literature on child trafficking in the country; construct a model that could be used to determine the probability of an area being the source of trafficked children; determine the actual situation in selected areas; and assess the existing institutional arrangements that have been set up to combat child trafficking vis-a-vis international and national commitments.

ABSTRACT

This book reveals that there is one common denominator in the motivation for Indonesian women to take leave of their families and their roots to work as migrant workers. They generally have a strong desire to do what they can to improve their families' economic fortunes by earning a better living far from home.
