Reader's note

The Information document on ratifications and standards-related activities (Report III (Part 2)) provides an overview of developments in international labour standards during 2006. It supplements the information contained in the report of the Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations (Report III) (Part 1A). Part I provides general information on recent developments concerning international labour standards, constitutional and other procedures in relation to the supervision of standards, and technical assistance in the field of standards. Part II provides information on the ratification of individual Conventions and Protocols in table format. Part III contains “country profiles” which bring together information on the ratification and application of Conventions and on the submission of instruments adopted by the International Labour Conference to the competent authorities in a table format by country.

Part I. General information on international labour standards

Recent developments

A. Adoption by the 94th (Maritime) Session of the International Labour Conference (February 2006) of the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006

1. Adoption

1. The 94th Session of the International Labour Conference adopted the Maritime Labour Convention (MLC), 2006,¹ through a final vote that exceeded expectations: there were 314 votes in favour and no votes against by the representatives of more than 106 countries at the International Labour Conference. Two Governments abstained,² expressing their support for the principles behind the Convention and explaining that their abstentions were for reasons that were not related to its merits. In accordance with Article VIII, the Convention will come into force 12 months after the date on which ratifications by at least 30 ILO member States with a total share in the world gross tonnage of ships of at least 33 per cent have been registered. To date, the Convention has been ratified by Liberia (in June 2006) which represents nearly 9 per cent of the world gross tonnage.

2. Overview of the substance and the innovative structure

2. The Maritime Labour Convention, 2006, embodies the substance of almost 70 existing ILO maritime labour instruments. It was expressly designed to be a globally applicable, easily understandable, readily updatable and uniformly enforced legal instrument that, once it enters into force, will be the “fourth pillar” of the international regulatory regime for quality shipping, complementing the key Conventions of the International Maritime Organization (IMO). The Convention thus establishes comprehensive minimum requirements for almost all aspects of working conditions for seafarers including, inter alia, conditions of employment, hours of work and rest, accommodation, recreational facilities, food and catering, health protection, medical care, welfare and social security protection. The Convention consists of basic provisions, i.e. Articles and Regulations, followed by a two part “Code” comprising Part A “Standards” and Part B, “Guidelines”. The Articles and Regulations set out the core rights and principles and the basic obligations. In most cases, they are not self-executing. Their purpose is rather to delimit the scope of the provisions in the Code, which sets out the details for the implementation of the basic rights and obligations. The provisions of the Code can be amended relatively quickly through an accelerated procedure. The Convention marks the beginning of a new era for the international standard-setting activities of the ILO in general and, specifically for its activities in the maritime sector.

¹ The Maritime Labour Convention, 2006, was developed through an unprecedented five-year process of intensive international tripartite consultations, social dialogue and consensus building, engaging more than 100 ILO member States and, at the final International Labour Conference, more than 1,000 participants.

² These were the Governments of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela and of Lebanon.

3. Innovative features

3. There are two features which are particularly relevant to the process of facilitating and supervising compliance with the standards contained in the Convention. One is its careful balance between firmness with regard to the principles and rights it sets forth and the flexibility given to ratifying Members with respect to the way in which those rights will be delivered. The other main feature that is particularly relevant to the compliance aspect is the active participation of all concerned: seafarers, shipowners and governments (flag, port and labour-supplying States) in implementing and monitoring the Convention's standards.

4. The Convention introduces the principle of continuous compliance awareness, which is present at every stage of the process, from the protection provided at the national level to that at the international level. The responsibility for this whole process, which will lead up to the ILO's supervisory functions starts with the seafarers and shipowners themselves. On board ship and ashore, seafarers have at their disposal a viable complaints mechanism with rights and remedies of which they must be informed. The shipowners are responsible not only for implementing the requirements of the Convention on their ships, but also for taking measures to monitor implementation: ensuring implementation is, of course, the responsibility of the national flag State, which will not allow its ships to sail without a maritime labour certificate (issued by the flag State) certifying that the working and living conditions of the seafarers on the ship meet the requirements of the Convention.³ The certificate is complemented by a declaration of maritime labour compliance. This required document is drawn up partly by the flag State administration and partly by the individual shipowner (and approved by the administration). It contains a brief summary of the provisions of national law which implement the Convention, as well as the measures that will be taken to implement those provisions on the ships concerned and the arrangements on the ships for ensuring ongoing compliance with those measures.

5. This process with the filing of complaints by seafarers and the requirement on shipowners to document their compliance will generate a wealth of information relevant to the supervisory process. In fact, the ILO supervisory bodies would be flooded if the information reached them in its raw state. However, the Convention provides for two points at which this information can be processed and channelled, where appropriate, towards the ILO procedures. The principal actor responsible is the member State itself, which is required to design an effective system for its inspection and certification functions, as well as its functions in the area of labour supply, and to provide the related information in its reports under article 22 of the ILO Constitution. This information must cover not only the system itself but also the method used for assessing its effectiveness.

6. This responsibility of the government in each ratifying country must of course be seen in the context of the tripartite reporting responsibility based on paragraph 2 of article 23 of the ILO Constitution. The other link between the information generated throughout the compliance process under the Convention and the ILO procedures is found in the provisions on port State control: that is, the inspection carried out by the competent authorities when foreign ships visit their ports. The port State is thus another actor (although perhaps unique to the maritime context) in the process of ensuring compliance with the requirements of the Convention. If a ship is found not to comply with the requirements of the Convention, the port State has the right to transmit its inspector's report, together with any reply from the flag State concerned, to the ILO Director-General, with a view to such action as may be considered appropriate and expedient in order to ensure that a record is kept of such information and that it is brought to the attention of parties which might be interested in availing themselves of relevant recourse procedures. Similar information is to be provided to the Director-General by port States with respect to complaints received by their officers from seafarers alleging a breach of the requirements of the Convention. These innovative legal and administrative features are designed to create a synergy among the stakeholders.

7. As its future interactions with the Committee of Experts will be of particular importance in the implementation of the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006, special mention should be made of the establishment of the Special Tripartite Committee under Article XIII of the Convention. Its term of reference is to "keep the working of the Convention under continuous review". The main task of this Committee will be to adopt amendments to the Code under the accelerated procedure; it is, however, implied in the Convention that the Governing Body could give the Committee other relevant tasks. In the accomplishment of its general task of reviewing the working of the Convention, the Special Tripartite Committee would certainly benefit from the relevant comments of the Committee of Experts. In its turn, the Special Tripartite Committee might be able to provide useful information for the Committee of Experts.

4. Follow-up and complementary actions

8. As was recognized by the International Labour Conference, in particular in its resolution concerning the promotion of the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006, efforts will be needed to maintain the momentum towards ratification and many countries will need technical assistance, in varying degrees, in order to be in a position to ratify the Convention and to properly implement it after ratification.

9. The first step taken by the Office has therefore been the development of a five-year action plan to achieve rapid and widespread ratification and effective implementation of the Convention. Under this plan, the Office will seek to identify the needs of countries and the action that can best respond to those needs. It will then either provide the necessary support itself or arrange for assistance to be provided through cooperation with other countries or institutions. The action foreseen will consist of regional seminars, national workshops, assistance or advice in the review of relevant national laws and infrastructures, and the development of promotional and training materials especially in the area of inspection, and similar activities that will enable interested countries to move towards ratification. The action plan will be implemented through the active involvement of the ILO tripartite constituents.

10. The Office has developed a range of communication tools aimed at promoting the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006, facilitating access to the text of the Convention and the related discussions and texts as well as providing all the necessary explanations thereon. A special trilingual Internet site for the Convention and Conference-related materials has been developed⁴ as well as a dedicated email address for technical inquiries about the Convention.⁵ A promotional CD-ROM has been prepared in English, French and Spanish. This CD-ROM contains, in addition to the text of the Convention, all the necessary tools for a better understanding of the Convention and, therefore, for the promotion of its ratification and implementation. Among the tools appearing in the CD-ROM, one can mention: briefing slides; short videos of statements made by participants at the 94th (Maritime) Session of the Conference highlighting the importance of the Convention; a booklet entitled Frequently asked questions (FAQ) providing explanations on the background and rationale of the Convention as well as on its innovative structure and innovative solutions.

B. New standards considered by the International Labour Conference at its 95th Session (May–June 2006)

1. International Labour Conference Committee on Occupational Safety and Health – Standard setting, second discussion, with a view to the adoption of a Convention and a Recommendation

11. At its 95th Session (May–June 2006), the Conference adopted with an overwhelming majority a new Promotional Framework for Occupational Safety and Health Convention, 2006 (No. 187), and an accompanying Recommendation.⁶ These new instruments follow up the Global Strategy on Occupational Safety and Health adopted in 2003 after the first general discussion based on an integrated approach. The establishment of a preventative safety and health culture and the adoption of a management systems approach to occupational safety and health are central features in these new instruments, and they are designed to encourage member States to place occupational safety and health high on national agendas with support from the highest political levels; to strengthen their national occupational safety and health systems; and to promote a national preventative safety and health culture on a continuous basis.

12. At this session, the Conference also adopted a resolution concerning asbestos urging member States to eliminate future use of asbestos; to identify and properly manage asbestos in use; to prevent future asbestos-related diseases and deaths; and to protect workers from exposure to asbestos, and requesting the Governing Body to direct the ILO to continue encouraging member States to ratify and give effect to the provisions of the Asbestos Convention, 1986 (No. 162), and the Occupational Cancer Convention, 1974 (No. 139). As reflected in the report of the Committee on Safety and Health,⁷ the consideration of this resolution was controversial. The question whether this resolution could be discussed in the Committee was settled by vote,⁸ and in the ensuing discussion on substance and final vote adopting the resolution,⁹ the Employer members did not take part.

2. International Labour Conference Committee on the Employment Relationship – Standard setting, second discussion, with a view to the adoption of a Recommendation

13. A new Recommendation on the employment relationship was adopted at the 95th Session (June 2006) of the International Labour Conference. While the Recommendation was adopted after a single discussion, it had been preceded by a number of related discussions during earlier sessions of the International Labour Conference, beginning in 1997 and 1998 with an unsuccessful double discussion of a proposed Convention and Recommendation on contract labour, and a general discussion in 2003 on the scope of the employment relationship.

14. A majority of two-thirds required for the adoption of the Recommendation by the plenary of the Conference was met,¹⁰ however, the Employer members voted almost unanimously against the adoption of the Recommendation. The Employer members expressed the view that the Recommendation should be rejected as it was a bipartite instrument, and was bad for business and employment. The Employer members objected in particular to the inclusion of triangular employment relationships in the instrument, and what they characterized as overly simplistic criteria and indicators, and a presumption of an employment relationship.

15. The new Recommendation contains four substantive parts: national policy of protection for workers in an employment relationship; determination of the existence of an employment relationship; monitoring and implementation; and a final paragraph stating that the Recommendation does not revise the Private Employment Agencies Recommendation, 1997 (No. 188), nor can it revise the Private Employment Agencies Convention, 1997 (No. 181).

3. International Labour Conference Committee on the Fishing Sector Relationship – Standard setting, second discussion, with a view to the adoption of a Recommendation

16. At its 92nd Session (June 2004), the International Labour Conference held a first discussion of a comprehensive standard (a Convention supplemented by a Recommendation) on work in the fishing sector. The second discussion took place at the 93rd Session (May–June 2005) of the Conference, and the resulting proposed instruments were voted on in plenary after a lively discussion. The Convention failed to be adopted for lack of quorum, while the Recommendation was adopted. As a consequence, the Conference adopted a motion requesting the ILO's Governing Body to place on the agenda of the 96th Session of the Conference in 2007 an item concerning work in the fishing sector based on the report of the Committee on the Fishing Sector of the 93rd Session.

17. At its 294th Session (November 2005), the Governing Body followed this request and included on the agenda of the 96th Session of the International Labour Conference an item concerning work in the fishing sector with a view to the adoption of a Convention supplemented by a Recommendation.¹¹ In its decision, the Governing Body specified that the Conference should use as a basis for its discussion the report of the Committee on the Fishing Sector of the 93rd Session as well as the outcome of further tripartite consultations.

C. Standards-related items placed on the agendas of the International Labour Conference and the Governing Body

1. Labour inspection

18. At the 95th Session (May–June 2006) of the International Labour Conference, the Conference Committee on the Application of Standards discussed the General Survey by the Committee of Experts on labour inspection. The lively, rich and in-depth discussion bore witness to the convergence of opinions between the tripartite constituents with regard to the need to develop labour inspection systems capable of ensuring decent working conditions and sustainable economic growth, on the basis of the principles set forth in the relevant ILO instruments. It was recommended that particular emphasis be placed on raising awareness among a number of developing countries of the socio-economic advantages of implementing Convention No. 129, in view of the dominance of the agricultural sector, the vulnerability of the labour force working in that sector and the specific potential risks that agriculture can present to workers and their families. The discussion shed light on the broad range of new forms of employment relationship and stressed the need for international labour standards to be incorporated into national legislation, to allocate adequate resources to labour inspection and to strengthen tripartism.

19. It was agreed that the Office would prepare a paper for the 297th Session of the Governing Body (November 2006) on labour inspection, an item on the Governing Body agenda (Committee on Employment and Social Policy). This paper, in which a number of relevant ILO sectors and units were involved, is based on the General Survey and the Conference Committee's discussion and defines the role that the ILO should be in a position to play in terms of strengthening national labour inspection systems. To this end, it formulates proposals that take due account of noteworthy phenomena such as workforce migration, the emergence of voluntary occupational safety and health monitoring systems, the impact on the workplace of the HIV/AIDS pandemic and the different forms of forced labour and child labour. Among the approaches being proposed by the Office are the continued promotion of the ratification and application of international standards on labour inspection, as well as the development of strategies and tools appropriate to the changing labour market and workplace; preparation of a "vision" document on the role of labour inspection in Decent Work Country Programmes (DWCPs); organization of an international meeting of labour inspectors, tasked with perfecting the governance strategies for tomorrow's world of work; preparation of fact sheets, guides and good practice case studies in various formats (especially via the Internet site); design of tools for policy-making in the relevant areas and for the training of labour inspection professionals; reassessment by the Subcommittee on Multinational

¹¹ The Legal Adviser, in an opinion provided to the Conference, noted that the motion referred to the report of the Committee on the Fishing Sector that had proposed both a Convention and a Recommendation. He concluded that, when the matter was being reviewed, it would be necessary to review the Recommendation and probably to adopt a new Recommendation that would replace the Recommendation adopted in 2005.

Enterprises of the ILO's role with respect to the supervision of private corporate social responsibility systems.

2. Improvements to the ILO's standards-related activities

20. The following developments contain an update on the discussions in the Governing Body at its 295th Session (March 2006) on improvements to the ILO's standards-related activities. It should be recalled that at its 294th Session (November 2005), the Governing Body approved proposals for the implementation of a strategic orientation for standards and for implementing standards-related policies and procedures. The four interrelated components of the strategy are described in the Information document on ratifications and standards-related activities.¹² The Office was also requested to hold consultations with the tripartite constituents by March 2006.

21. At the 295th Session (March 2006) of the Governing Body, the Office submitted a progress report (November 2005–March 2006) focusing on the most important recent activities and developments regarding the strategic orientation. This included the discussion of the Committee of Experts, at its 76th Session, as part of the ongoing review of its working methods. In particular, the Governing Body was informed of the criteria for cases of progress and for footnotes articulated by the Committee. The Governing Body was also informed of the discussion held within the Committee regarding its responsibilities inherent in the international supervision of Conventions in the context of an ever-increasing workload. In its paper, the Office underlined that “the situation at present indicates that if the ILO is to continue to supervise effectively the application of standards, it may need to review its approach to supervision in order to determine how best to structure its procedures to provide optimal service in the face of this increasing workload and limited resources”.

22. The Governing Body was also informed that given the short time between the 294th and the 295th Sessions, and a particularly heavy agenda for both the constituents and the Office, it had not been possible to begin the tripartite consultations. The Governing Body took note of the Office's paper and the discussion thereon and invited the Office to hold tripartite consultations based on the discussions and decisions taken at its 294th Session (November 2005) and 295th Session (March 2006). The Office was also asked to submit a paper to the Governing Body on all the pending issues at its 297th Session (November 2006). The substantive discussion on the implementation of international labour standards was moved from the November 2006 session of the Governing Body to the March 2007 session.

23. With regard to strengthening the functioning of the Conference Committee on the Application of Standards, informal consultations have taken place since the 295th Session of the Governing Body (March 2006). Discussions in the Committee on Freedom of Association regarding its procedures are ongoing and the Committee will report back to the Governing Body in due course.

3. Technical cooperation

24. In line with a Conference resolution of 1987, according to which the ILO technical cooperation programme should be regularly reviewed, the International Labour Conference held in June 2006, a general discussion on the role of the ILO in technical cooperation. Since the previous discussion in 1999, significant changes had occurred in the approach and modalities for development and implementation of ILO programmes and activities.

25. The Committee on Technical Cooperation established by the International Labour Conference generally agreed that international labour standards constitute a comparative advantage that should be maximized to raise the Organization's profile within the United Nations system. Technical cooperation was, inter alia, conceived as a vehicle for promoting and effectively implementing international labour standards. Accordingly, the adopted conclusions request that every assistance, as a priority, be provided to member States to promote the universal ratification and implementation of all eight fundamental Conventions. It is further recommended that, in the identification of problems of implementation calling for ILO action in the form of technical cooperation, due attention be given to issues raised by constituents in the supervisory procedures or identified by the supervisory bodies, so that technical cooperation can play a complementary role to the ILO supervisory mechanism.

4. Other matters

26. The Instrument of Amendment of the ILO's Constitution on the abrogation of obsolete Conventions has been ratified or accepted by 90 member States. For the entry into force, 120 ratifications or acceptances are required. Since the beginning of the year (which is approximately the time at which the campaign for the ratification of the Instrument was launched) seven new ratifications/acceptances have been registered; the last acceptance came from Viet Nam and was registered on 15 May 2006.¹³ The Office will report to the 297th Session of the Governing Body (November 2006) on progress made within the framework of the campaign.

27. With respect to the Manual for drafting ILO instruments, intended as a reference text for those involved in the process of developing and drafting international labour standards, this was submitted to the Governing Body at its 292nd Session (March 2005); an interactive electronic version of the Manual is available on the ILO web site as well as a CD-ROM version available in English, French and Spanish. The Office is adapting the full text into a user-friendly quick guide.

D. General discussions based on an integrated approach: New discussion and follow-up

International Labour Conference Committee on Migrant Workers: Follow-up to a general discussion based on an integrated approach

28. The follow-up to the ILO resolution concerning a fair deal for migrant workers in the global economy, adopted by the International Labour Conference in 2004, continued to focus in 2006 on the development and dissemination of a non-binding ILO Multilateral Framework on Labour Migration. Following its adoption by a tripartite meeting of experts (31 October–2 November 2005), the Governing Body, in March 2006, authorized the dissemination and promotion of the ILO Multilateral Framework on Labour Migration: Non-binding principles and guidelines for a rights-based approach to labour migration. The principles and guidelines on migration policy included in the Framework are firmly grounded in international instruments adopted by the ILO and the United Nations. The International Labour Standards Department, including the standards specialists in the field, and the International Migration Programme, also continued their work to promote the ratification and implementation of the Migration for Employment Convention (Revised), 1949 (No. 97), and the Migrant Workers (Supplementary Provisions) Convention, 1975 (No. 143), as well as other standards relevant to migrant workers such as the Private Employment Agencies Convention, 1997 (No. 181). It should be noted in this respect that ratifications by Albania and the Republic of Moldova of Convention No. 97 were registered in March and December 2005 respectively. The ratification by Armenia of Convention No. 143 was registered in January 2006. The momentum created after the general discussion on migrant workers in 2004, has also generated an increasing number of requests for comments by the department and specialists in the field on draft legislation relating to labour migration (Albania, Ghana, Lebanon, Syrian Arab Republic, Timor-Leste, Viet Nam). Furthermore, following the meetings of the Organization of Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) relating to migration issues in 2005, in which the department participated, the ILO and the International Organization for Migration (IOM) joined the OSCE to prepare the first international Handbook on establishing effective labour migration policies in countries of origin and destination (2006). The handbook contains substantial contributions from the International Labour Standards Department, including a chapter on the international legal framework for the protection of migrant workers, and highlights the importance of the ILO Multilateral Framework on Labour Migration.

Constitutional and other procedures

A. Measures taken under article 33 of the ILO Constitution: The question of the observance by the Government of Myanmar of the Forced Labour Convention, 1930 (No. 29)

29. At the 83rd Session of the International Labour Conference in June 1996, a complaint was submitted under article 26 of the Constitution concerning the observance by Myanmar of the Forced Labour Convention, 1930 (No. 29). The Governing Body decided to establish a Commission of Inquiry to examine the complaint. This Commission completed its report in July 1998, concluding that Myanmar's obligation under Article 1, paragraph 1, of Convention No. 29 to suppress the use of forced or compulsory labour was violated in law and in practice. In March 1999, the Governing Body decided to include the question of the application of Convention No. 29 by Myanmar on the agenda of each session of the Conference.

30. At its 87th Session (June 1999), the International Labour Conference adopted a resolution under the terms of which the Government should cease to benefit from any technical cooperation or assistance from the ILO, except for the purpose of direct assistance to implement immediately the recommendations of the Commission of Inquiry. Under another resolution adopted by the Conference at its 88th Session (June 2000), the constituents of the ILO were invited, under article 33 of the ILO Constitution and on the recommendation of the Governing Body, in particular to review the relations that they may have with Myanmar and take appropriate measures to ensure that Myanmar cannot take advantage of such relations to perpetuate or extend the system of forced or compulsory labour referred to by the Commission of Inquiry.

31. A number of technical missions were undertaken and in the framework of the "Understanding on an ILO objective assessment" concluded on 19 May 2001 the Government of Myanmar agreed to receive a High-Level Team to carry out an objective assessment with respect to the practical implementation and actual impact of the framework of legislative, executive and administrative measures reported by the Government, within the overall objective of the complete elimination of forced labour in Myanmar in law and in practice. The Government subsequently accepted the appointment of an ILO Liaison Officer to Myanmar responsible for conducting all activities relevant to the prompt and effective elimination of forced labour.

32. In May 2003, the Government and the ILO agreed on a Joint Plan of Action on the elimination of forced labour practices in Myanmar. However, this Plan of Action could not be implemented in view of the events which occurred at the national level. At its 291st Session (November 2004), the Governing Body requested the Director-General to field a very High-Level Team (vHLT) to evaluate the attitude of the authorities in Myanmar and to assess their determination to continue their cooperation with the ILO. On 23 February 2005, having failed to secure the necessary meeting in order to complete its mandate, and before departing the country, the vHLT delivered an informal aide-memoire setting out the concrete steps on which it believed progress should be made.

33. At its 292nd Session (March 2005), the Governing Body noted the growing feeling that the "wait and see" attitude that prevailed among members since 2001 appeared to have lost its raison d'être. It thus unanimously agreed to transmit its conclusions to all those whom the International Labour Conference resolution of 2000 was addressed, with a view to them taking the appropriate measures.

34. In October 2005, a representative of the Director-General joined the Liaison Officer for consultation with the Minister for Labour to seek clarification of the intentions of the authorities through an informal and frank discussion. The Myanmar authorities indicated that Myanmar was not willing to engage in any review of the steps recommended by the vHLT nor of the Plan of Action. The only mechanism which could be acceptable to them in dealing with complaints of forced labour was through the current ILO presence. Numerous members expressed a feeling of grave concern about the degradation of the situation in Myanmar during the 294th Session (November 2005) of the Governing Body. A number of members were of the view that the only way left for the Organization, in light of the events that had transpired, was to enable the Conference itself to revisit the measures adopted in the 2000 International Labour Conference resolution under article 33 of the Constitution by placing a specific relevant item on its agenda.

35. At its 295th Session (March 2006), the Governing Body decided that an item be placed on the agenda of the 95th Session of the International Labour Conference (May–June 2006) as follows: “To review what further action could be taken by the ILO in accordance with its Constitution in order: (i) to effectively secure Myanmar’s compliance with the recommendations of the Commission of Inquiry; and (ii) to ensure that no action is taken against complainants or their representatives.”

36. At its 95th Session (May–June 2006), the Conference referred the item to its Selection Committee where one point was raised concerning the possibility that the ILO has to seek an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice which would require the formulation of a specific legal question relating to the Forced Labour Convention, 1930 (No. 29). The deliberations of the Selection Committee, as well as the report of the special sitting of the Committee on the Application of Standards, were brought to the attention of the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) at its July 2006 session.

37. At its 296th Session (November 2006), the Governing Body expressed great frustration that the Myanmar authorities had not been able to agree on a mechanism to deal with complaints of forced labour within the framework set out in the Conference conclusions. The authorities had therefore missed a critical opportunity to demonstrate a real commitment to cooperating with the ILO to resolve the forced labour problem, which once again raised serious questions as to whether any such commitment existed. The Governing Body concluded, among other things, that the Myanmar authorities should, as a matter of utmost urgency and in good faith, conclude with the Office an agreement on a mechanism to deal with complaints of forced labour, on the specific basis of the final compromise text proposed by the ILO mission and also that irrespective of the status of the moratorium on prosecutions of complainants, it must be clearly understood that any move to prosecute complainants would be a violation of Convention No. 29 and would open the way to international legal steps on the basis of article 37, paragraph 1, of the ILO Constitution, in accordance with the conclusions of the Conference Selection Committee in June 2006. The Governing Body indicated that a specific item would be placed on the agenda of the March 2007 session of the Governing Body, to enable it to move on legal options, including, as appropriate, involving the International Court of Justice.

B. Representation submitted under article 24 of the ILO Constitution

38. Representations may be filed under article 24 of the Constitution by industrial associations of employers or workers, alleging that a member State that has ratified a Convention has failed to secure within its jurisdiction the effective observance of that Convention. Once declared receivable, representations are examined by a tripartite committee established by the Governing Body. Their findings are followed up by the Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations. The table below indicates developments concerning representations in 2006.

Country	Conventions	Complainant organization	Current status
Argentina	Indigenous and Tribal Peoples Convention, 1989 (No. 169)	Education Workers' Union of Rio Negro (UNTER)	Pending: declared receivable by the Governing Body at its 297th Session (November 2006); tripartite committee established

* The Governing Body decided to refer to the Committee on Freedom of Association the allegations relating to the application of Conventions Nos. 87 and 98.

C. Complaints submitted under article 26 of the ILO Constitution

39. Complaints may be filed under article 26 of the Constitution alleging that a member State that has ratified a Convention is not securing its effective observance. Complaints may be filed by another member State that has ratified the same Convention. The Governing Body may initiate the procedure either of its own motion or upon receipt of a complaint from a delegate to the International Labour Conference. The Governing Body may appoint a commission of inquiry to consider the complaint. Findings of the commission of inquiry are followed up by the Committee of Experts or the Committee on Freedom of Association.

Complaint against Belarus

40. At its 288th Session (November 2003), the Governing Body established a Commission of Inquiry to examine the implementation by Belarus of the Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organise Convention, 1948 (No. 87), and the Right to Organise and Collective Bargaining Convention, 1949 (No. 98). The report of the Commission was submitted to the 291st Session of the Governing Body (November 2004). The Governing Body entrusted the Committee on Freedom of Association with the responsibility to supervise and follow up the recommendations of the Commission. The Conference Committee on the Application of Standards, during its examination of the application of these Conventions in June 2006, suggested that, if no further progress could be noted, the Governing Body should look into further measures that might be necessary for the implementation of the Commission of Inquiry recommendations at its meeting in November 2006. A paper was presented for discussion and debate at the Governing Body's 297th Session. Following that discussion, the Governing Body decided to place the item on its agenda once again for March 2007.

Complaint against the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela

41. At its 291st Session (November 2004), the Governing Body was informed of a complaint submitted under article 26 of the Constitution concerning the non-observance by the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela of the Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organise Convention, 1948 (No. 87), and the Right to Organise and Collective Bargaining Convention, 1949 (No. 98). The Governing Body transmitted the complaint to the Committee on Freedom of Association to help it to decide whether the complaint should be forwarded to a commission of inquiry. In November 2005, the Committee on Freedom of Association examined the complaint and recommended to the Governing Body to send a direct contacts mission to the country before deciding on the action to be taken in respect of the complaint. The Committee on Freedom of Association has repeated this request to the Government in its March, June and November 2006 reports.

D. Special procedures concerning freedom of association

42. At each of its last meetings (March, June and November 2006), the Committee on Freedom of Association had before it more than 176 cases (this figure represents actual cases pending throughout the year without repetition for the same case treated on several occasions) concerning some 67 countries from all parts of the world, for which it presented interim or final conclusions, or for which the examination was adjourned pending the arrival of information from governments (340th, 341st, 342nd and 343rd Reports). Many of these cases have been before the Committee on Freedom of Association several times. Moreover, more than 50 new cases have been submitted to it since the December 2005 meeting of the Committee of Experts. The Committee on Freedom of Association drew the attention of the Committee of Experts to the legislative aspects of the following cases: Algeria (2153), Australia (2326), Bangladesh (2327 and 2371), Cambodia (2443), Canada (2314 and 2333), Guatemala (2295), Hungary (2118), Indonesia (2236 and 2336), Mauritius (2281), Nigeria (2432), Serbia (2415) and Turkey (2303).

Technical assistance

A. Standards-related technical assistance and technical cooperation by the International Labour Standards Department

1. Technical assistance in reporting and other standards-related obligations

43. The International Labour Standards Department contributes to the many activities carried out by the standards specialists of the subregional offices concerning compliance by member States with their reporting and other standards-related obligations.

2. Advisory missions

44. A high-level mission visited Niger in January 2006 following the discussions at the Conference Committee on the Application of Standards in June 2005 on the observation addressed to the Government by the Committee of Experts under Convention No. 182. The main issues to be reviewed by the mission related to the use of children for begging (enfants talibés), the use of children in hazardous work (mines and quarries) and the trafficking of boys for economic exploitation and girls for both sexual and economic exploitation (domestic work). The Committee of Experts examined the mission report at its November–December 2006 session and made the corresponding recommendations to the Government.

45. A technical advisory mission visited Qatar in March 2006 following the discussions at the Conference Committee on the Application of Standards on the observation addressed to the Government by the Committee of Experts in 2005 under Convention No. 182. The mandate of the mission was to examine the issues of the trafficking of children under 18 to work as camel jockeys and the hazardous conditions in which trafficked camel jockeys under 18 years of age perform their work. The Committee of Experts examined the mission report at its November–December 2006 session.

46. The technical assistance mission to the Islamic Republic of Iran was undertaken as a follow-up to the Conference discussion on the application of the Protection of Wages Convention, 1949 (No. 95) by the Islamic Republic of Iran in June 2005. The three-day mission (14–19 April 2006) had a triple objective: firstly, to assess the current situation with respect to wage arrears in both the public and private sectors; secondly, to obtain information on any concrete measures or initiatives the Government might have taken or planned, to resolve the problem of delayed payment or non-payment of wages and the results obtained; thirdly, to advise the Government on possible solutions in the light of other national experiences and the jurisprudence of the Committee of Experts.

47. In the maritime field, barely two months after the unanimous adoption of the MLC, 2006, the International Labour Standards Department carried out, in cooperation with an expert from the Department of Sectoral Activities, a tripartite workshop on the new instrument in Teheran and discussed the Seafarers' Identity Documents Convention (Revised), 2003 (No. 185). All tripartite constituents advocated early ratification of the MLC, to enhance seafarers' working conditions and to maintain the competitiveness of Iranian ships during stricter port State inspections under the new instrument. They were also in favour of early ratification of Convention No. 185, to counter disadvantages that, according to participants, Iranian seafarers were suffering under strict safety regimes recently being implemented in many ports of the world. Subsequent discussions with high-ranking government officials confirmed their approach regarding both Conventions.

48. A further training activity was carried out jointly with an expert from SECTOR at the ILO Turin Centre in August, for trade unionists from Latin American countries on the ratification, promotion and supervision of the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006. Greater knowledge and understanding of the instrument, together with a strategy for action discussed during the seminar will enable them to promote it with their governments and social partners and to inform members of their rights under the radically new approach adopted by the Convention.

49. In April 2006, gender and standards specialists discussed in Beirut with the Ministry of Labour, representatives of diplomatic missions and of NGOs, the ways to improve the application of international labour standards for migrant domestic workers in Lebanon. Key issues regarding the regulation and monitoring of private placement agencies for migrant domestic workers in the country were examined, and the ILO was requested to continue providing support in the revision of the practice with regard to employment services in the country.

50. A technical advisory mission to Lithuania in March 2006 provided assistance to constituents concerning the development of workplace policies to promote equality of workers with family responsibilities with a view to strengthening the application of Convention No. 156.

51. Assistance to harmonize gender equality laws was provided to Bosnia and Herzegovina in May 2006.

52. A mission to Saudi Arabia in September 2006 was carried out concerning the conclusions of the Conference Committee adopted in respect of Convention No. 111 during the 93rd Session of the International Labour Conference (June 2005).

3. Training activities

53. As part of the strategy for building institutional capacities as regards international labour standards, the department is working in close cooperation with the standards training programme run by the International Training Centre in Turin. The training programme aims to build the capacities of those involved to participate actively in the standards system and to integrate international labour standards and their control mechanisms into policies and legislation with a view to guaranteeing decent work and contributing to the achievement of the millennium objectives. Two specific programmes have been launched as part of the training programme: first, a freedom of association programme established in 2001 to meet the numerous requests for training from participants and, second, a programme on child labour and forced labour was launched in 2005.

54. In 2006, the training programme action has continued at a consistent rate. Training activities relating to standards have reached a total of 55, and six products involving teaching and information materials have been completed. Evaluation of these different activities has confirmed the value of the training provided.

55. The activities of the training programme on standards may be classified as follows:

- (a) Interregional tripartite activities implemented by the Turin Centre, relating to the following subjects and addressing various audiences: international labour standards and equality in employment; international labour standards and productivity; international labour standards and the social dimension of globalization; international standards for the elimination of child labour and forced labour; international labour standards and the rights of indigenous and tribal peoples; international labour standards and constitutional procedures presented to delegates of the Conference and international labour standards presented to judges, lawyers and professors of law. Finally, in the field of the elimination of child labour and forced labour various interregional activities have been conducted.

- (b) Activities implemented at regional, subregional and national levels with subjects selected in close coordination between the Turin Centre, the Office and the regions, which this year were as follows: a tripartite seminar on the rights of rural workers and freedom of association for Namibia and Malawi; courses on freedom of association for workers in the informal sector; bipartite seminars on freedom of association in the public sector held in Argentina, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru; tripartite seminar on freedom of association held in Bahrain; regional and national courses for employers, respectively covering supervisory mechanisms and freedom of association and child labour, held in Panama, Ukraine and Turin; courses for judges and lawyers held in Colombia and Costa Rica (regional activities), in Burundi (subregional activity) and, finally, in Brazil, Ethiopia, Indonesia, Madagascar, Mali, Paraguay, Romania, Senegal and Ukraine (at national level); courses on Convention No. 169 on the rights of indigenous and tribal peoples held at subregional level in Cameroon and Thailand; and courses in the field of child labour on reporting on fundamental Conventions on child labour for the staff of the Turkish child labour unit, child labour and labour inspection for Eastern Europe and Central Asia (Istanbul), legal action on child trafficking for labour exploitation in Western and Central Africa, child labour in commercial agriculture in Western and Central Africa, and a general course on action on child labour for Portuguese-speaking countries.

56. The specific programme of training activities for judges and lawyers has continued to develop and, in view of this, an external evaluation was carried out. The result of this evaluation was very positive in terms of relevance, quality and impact. The evaluation report is available on request. Emphasis should be given to the importance of these activities in enabling judges to become more aware and to make better use of the work of the Committee of Experts. A specific methodology and teaching materials were developed on this subject.

57. An interregional course organized jointly with the International Labour Standards Department for delegates to the Conference was also held this year. The participants considered this course relevant to their needs within the framework of their professional duties and, in general, the evaluation was very positive at both technical and administrative levels. An in-depth discussion and evaluation also looked at the format (geographic and linguistic coverage of this activity).

58. Pilot training experiments for parliamentarians were held in Senegal and Paraguay. Parliamentarians have a fundamental role to play with regard both to the ratification of international Conventions and in the procedure for the amendment of legislation intended to bring it into line with Conventions already ratified. In this respect, these activities are intended to strengthen knowledge of the ILO standards system and of the results of work carried out by the control bodies, in particular the Committee of Experts on the Application of the Conventions and Recommendations and the Committee on Freedom of Association; this knowledge has been found to be particularly important in moving the dialogue with governments forward more effectively.

59. A training programme intended for journalists is currently being developed. This course aims to provide journalists and public relations professionals with knowledge of and the ability to use standards and the work of the supervisory bodies, so as to promote public awareness of internationally recognized social rights and their relevance with regard to social and labour questions.

60. The development of training materials plays a vital role in the promotion and effectiveness of training activities. This year, the following tools have been published or launched: a manual on child labour reporting, a manual on forced labour, a training guide on control mechanisms for employers, a guide to standards intended for an uninitiated audience, a manual on how to draft ILO standards (in cooperation with the Office of the Legal Adviser), a manual for the training of judges, an interactive CD-ROM on all categories intended to facilitate the activities of trainers and finally a CD-ROM on the application of international law.

61. Finally, since 2004, the Turin training programme has included in its interregional activities on globalization a module specifically dedicated to corporate social responsibility (CSR) and, every year, it conducts a module on the subject of “International labour standards and CSR” as part of a master’s degree in CSR organized by a group of Italian universities. A guide to international reference tools for CSR is currently being produced. The purpose of this guide is to set out the general reference system of standards for CSR.

62. Since 2005, partnership has been established between the ILO subregional office in Addis Ababa and the Training Centre for judges and prosecutors to jointly organize several training workshops for judges in Ethiopia, in a national capacity-building bid.

4. Promotional activities

1. Development of an effective communications strategy on international labour standards

63. In November 2005 the Governing Body endorsed a plan to identify and develop a number of tools that would enable the ILO to disseminate information on international labour standards to a broad public, in addition to the ILO’s tripartite constituents. Since then the Office has produced several tools to that effect. In March 2006 the Handbook of Procedures was thoroughly revised, reissued and made available online in English, French and Spanish, as well as in Arabic, Chinese, German and Russian. The International Labour Standards Department also issued the regular updates of ILOLEX, ILSE and ANITA CD-ROMs on international labour standards, and published the fifth edition of the Digest of decisions and principles of the Freedom of Association Committee. In addition, translations in Arabic and Japanese of Rules of the game: A brief introduction to international labour standards were prepared by the ILO offices in Cairo and Tokyo.

64. The International Labour Standards Department and the International Training Centre in Turin published a revised version of the Guide to international labour standards, and the Practical guide to child labour reporting, jointly with IPEC. They also produced the International labour standards: A global approach. Furthermore, a brochure on “Gender Equality and Decent Work” including a CD-ROM was prepared with the Bureau for Gender Equality.

65. In November 2006, the International Labour Standards Department organized an international colloquium for the 80th anniversary of the Committee of Experts. The aim was to put the Committee’s work into broader perspective by bringing together practitioners from different international human rights bodies and scholars specialized in the problems of state compliance with binding norms in international law to discuss the effectiveness of supervision in the international legal system.

66. With regard to the databases maintained by the International Labour Standards Department, the NATLEX database was developed to include a country profiles module, which brings together all ILO standards-related information regarding a particular country into one access portal, including legislation profiles developed under the integrated approach to occupational safety and health and migrant workers.¹⁴ Finally, the International Labour Standards Department web site was updated to include a module exclusively dedicated to promoting the Maritime Labour Convention in English, French and Spanish.¹⁵

2. Research on the economic impact of international labour standards

67. In March 2006, the International Labour Standards Department launched a research project on the economic dynamics of standards with funding from the Government of the Netherlands. The study, carried out in cooperation with several technical units in the ILO, will examine the medium- and long-term effects of the application of international labour standards in the areas of equality and non-discrimination, social security, occupational safety and health, working time, and skills and vocational training. In August, a working group composed of officials from the Employment Sector, the Policy Integration Department, and the International Labour Standards Department drafted terms of reference for the preparation of analytical literature reviews on the economic effects of standards in a number of selected subject areas. These reviews will take stock of the state of research on the short- and long-term economic impacts of regulations and policies at the macro, sectoral and firm level which apply international labour standards. The reviews will describe the approaches and methodologies used, models and theories, which underpin studies, data used, notable case studies, and major findings. The studies will conclude by mapping out areas where there is consensus, areas where there is debate, and areas where further research would be warranted. The reviews will be edited into a single document with an introduction and conclusion and should be submitted for discussion at the Governing Body in November 2007.

3. The Maritime Labour Convention (MLC), 2006

68. In August 2006, a one-week translation conference in Hamburg, Germany between Government representatives of the German-speaking member States – Germany, Austria and Switzerland – together with the German social partners and experts from the International Labour Standards Department and the Official Documentation Branch established a consolidated German version of the MLC, 2006. The translation will permit speedy submission of the extensive Convention to national parliaments and will facilitate its targeted promotion in the national language. During a press meeting at the end of the conference, the Vice-Ministers of the German Ministry of Labour and of the Ministry of Transport promised ratification of the Convention by January 2008, as well as assistance to the ILO in promoting ratification internationally.

69. In cooperation with the International Shipping Federation and the International Transport Workers' Federation, an extensive action plan has been developed to achieve rapid and widespread ratification and effective implementation of the MLC, 2006. The five-year action plan is designed to achieve, first, the goal of rapid and widespread ratification in order to bring the Convention into force and second, the related objective of laying a foundation, including developing the institutional and other tools, for assuring effective national-level implementation to meet the objectives of the Convention.

¹⁴ http://www.ilo.org/dyn/natlex/country_profiles.home.

¹⁵ <http://www.ilo.org/maritime>.

70. NORMES and SECTOR, in collaboration with ILO field offices and in partnership with relevant government agencies, the International Transport Workers' Federation, the International Shipping Federation and in cooperation with the IMO and other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, will implement the action plan and thus contribute to the achievement of decent employment and satisfactory social conditions for seafarers and will also support the safety, security and environmental protection objectives of other important international Conventions by improving shipping operations in the industry worldwide and helping to eliminate substandard shipping operations.

71. Furthermore, various promotional activities of the maritime Conventions have been conducted (Bahamas, Barbados, Bulgaria, Canada, Fiji, Japan, Republic of Korea, Panama, Philippines and United Kingdom). At the regional level, a meeting has been organized with the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs of the European Parliament.

4. Social protection and working conditions

72. In the area of social protection and working conditions, assistance was provided through national tripartite seminars, advisory and technical assistance missions and activities conducted in collaboration with the ILO International Training Centre in Turin. The activities included assistance missions concerning the application of social security standards conducted in collaboration with the Council of Europe, in particular to Denmark and Estonia. Within the framework of the Decent Work Country Programme for Ukraine, technical cooperation activities were initiated with a view to progressive acceptance by Ukraine of the obligations under the ILO and European standards on social security. According to the time-bound road map agreed with the Government, studies were carried out by the national experts on the compatibility of Ukrainian legislation and practice with ILO Conventions Nos. 102, 121, 128, 130, 168 and the European Code of Social Security together with the econometric study on the level of social security benefits and funding. On the basis of the compatibility studies followed by consultations with responsible state bodies, social security institutions and social partners, national provisions were identified which need to be brought into conformity with the minimum international standards of social security. A high-level tripartite national conference to assess the findings and recommendations for legislative changes with a view to subsequent ratification of Convention No. 102 and the European Code of Social Security is planned for 2007.

5. ILO policy on indigenous people

73. The Project to Promote ILO Policy on Indigenous and Tribal Peoples (PRO 169), based in the International Labour Standards Department, undertakes a wide range of regional and country-specific activities to promote the application of the principles of Convention No. 169, as well as the integration of indigenous issues into other ILO activities to promote fundamental principles and rights at work. These include a project funded by the European Commission with three main components: collaboration with the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights to undertake research on legal protection of indigenous communities in Africa; promotion of indigenous and tribal peoples' rights (Conventions Nos. 107 and 169) as a key to conflict resolution, with a particular focus on Nepal; and documentation of good practices for implementing key provisions of Convention No. 169. Other, primarily DANIDA-funded activities, include: technical assistance to government and indigenous partners for the implementation of Convention No. 169 in Bolivia and other countries in Latin America; a national project for capacity building and development of national legislation and policies that integrate the rights, needs and priorities of indigenous and tribal peoples in Cambodia; a national project for capacity building and dialogue on indigenous issues in Cameroon; assistance to development of a law for the protection of the rights of indigenous peoples in the Democratic Republic of Congo; and assistance to Maasai communities in Kenya in protecting and using cultural heritage for employment creation, and in the development of strategies to combat child labour in pastoralist communities.

74. In connection with ongoing activities at country level, PRO 169 has conducted five micro studies on achieving the Millennium Development Goals in Bolivia, Cambodia, Cameroon, Guatemala and Nepal. The recommendations from these studies are being followed up at national level.

75. In addition, PRO 169, in collaboration with the ILO's International Training Centre in Turin, has implemented an interregional training programme for ILO and multilateral agency staff on indigenous rights and good practices, and regional training workshops on indigenous issues in Asia and Francophone Africa. All of these training programmes also explored and highlighted the linkages between indigenous issues and fundamental principles and rights at work. Other work undertaken by PRO 169 to highlight these linkages has included a handbook produced in collaboration with IPEC, on combating child labour in indigenous communities.

6. Promotion of international labour standards in Pakistan

76. During 2006, several activities in Pakistan were planned and realized to promote, at provincial level, awareness of the role and opportunities offered by international labour standards. Meetings in Islamabad, Lahore, Peshawar and Quetta with provincial authorities and representatives of the local professional organizations allowed the improvement of knowledge on the standard-setting system and the possibilities offered to local social partners to participate in the operation of the supervisory mechanism. The Subregional Office in New Delhi undertook two missions to Bangladesh to discuss with all stakeholders the promotion of Convention No. 107 followed by a national consultative meeting. The Office organized training in Chiang Mai on regional promotion of Conventions Nos. 169 and 107 with participants from Nepal (Convention No. 169), Bangladesh, India and Pakistan (Convention No. 107). As a result of ongoing promotion of ratification of fundamental Conventions, Pakistan ratified Convention No. 138. Further to several discussions at the Conference Committee, meetings were organized in the Islamic Republic of Iran on promoting the employment of women and respect of their rights at work.

B. Standards-related technical assistance and technical cooperation in the regions

77. Specialists in international labour standards are serving with the field offices located in the following cities: Addis Ababa, Bangkok, Brasilia, Cairo, Dakar, Harare, Manila, Moscow, New Delhi, San José and Santiago. The Subregional Office in Budapest does not have a standards specialist post as such, but the Senior Specialist on Social Dialogue is in charge of carrying out certain activities concerning international labour standards with the support of the International Labour Standards Department, as appropriate. Examples of the activities undertaken in the regions are described below.

78. The Subregional Office in Dakar organized in July 2006 a subregional training session on ILO normative activities. The training was provided to labour administration officials from six countries, namely Cape Verde, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Mali, Mauritania and Senegal, and focused on the reporting and other standards-related obligations such as the submission to the competent authorities of instruments adopted by the International Labour Conference, and the acceptance/ratification of the 1997 constitutional amendment. The training also put a special emphasis on pending comments of the Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations and the reporting schedule for reports under article 22 and article 19 of the ILO Constitution. National activities carried out by the Office included a tripartite seminar on international labour standards, social dialogue and decent work in Guinea, two advocacy seminars in Senegal to clarify principles of collective bargaining contained in ILO standards for trade unions in the education sector and a seminar for members of Parliament and journalists of Senegal to promote a better understanding of Conventions Nos. 138 and 182 on child labour. Following an invitation from the World Confederation of Labour, an advisory mission participated in the World Social Forum in Bamako to discuss and provide explanations on Conventions Nos. 29 and 105 on the elimination of forced labour. The Subregional Office in Dakar undertook several activities in cooperation with the ILO International Training Centre. It provided technical assistance to Mali and Senegal through seminars on international labour standards for judges and law practitioners in conjunction with national institutions. The training focused on the implementation of international labour standards at national level and the possible use of ILO supervisory bodies' comments by judges and law practitioners. Finally, a tripartite interregional activity on international labour standards and the challenges of globalization was organized in Dakar. Participants from Burkina Faso, Cape Verde, Chad, Guinea, Senegal and Togo were sensitized to policies and strategic options in relation to corporate social responsibilities and the respect of international labour standards.

79. The Subregional Office in Addis Ababa carried out several training and technical assistance activities. In particular, training took place in Ethiopia on international labour standards as well as on the Occupational Safety and Health Convention, 1981 (No. 155), including on the comments of the Committee of Experts thereon. This training involved officials from the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, labour inspectors as well as employers' and workers' representatives. Further, in light of a similar activity carried out in Madagascar, missions were undertaken to Kenya and the United Republic of Tanzania to establish and train an informal inter-ministerial team on the submission of reports on ratified Conventions. The objective of such activity is to ensure the involvement of all the ministries concerned in the drafting of reports as well as an appropriate distribution of workload among them. These activities resulted in the submission of a substantially increased number of reports in the United Republic of Tanzania, and full reporting in Kenya.

80. In April 2006, the Subregional Office in San José, in conjunction with IPEC, held a subregional seminar on report writing. The seminar, aimed at government officials, set out to improve the quality of reports submitted under article 22 of the ILO Constitution. Based on the examples of the two fundamental Conventions on child labour, No. 138 and No. 182, the seminar focused on techniques used to draft the article 22 report, i.e. the different sources of legislation to be reflected and collaboration between the Labour Ministry and other ministries and bodies in order to provide relevant, comprehensive and practical information. Similarly, in July 2006, a national seminar on report writing was held in Honduras. Participants included officials from the Ministry of Labour, labour inspectors and officials from other ministries responsible for providing substantive information to the Ministry of Labour department in charge of preparing reports on the application of the Conventions. Within the framework of the seminar, special assistance was provided relating to the preparation of the reports the Government had to submit this year to the Committee of Experts. Furthermore, in February 2006, a technical assistance mission to Panama was carried out. The Government had decided to include in the mission's terms of reference the questions relating not only to the application of Convention No. 87 but also to Convention No. 98 which were aimed at bringing national legislation into line with the principles enshrined in those Conventions. In August 2006, a tripartite seminar on specific problems relating to freedom of association and collective bargaining in the sector of the maquila took place in Guatemala. Finally, between September and December 2006, the Subregional Office in San José carried out a project to provide training on international labour standards to judges as well as to legal practitioners representing the interests of the social partners. Eleven seminars have been carried out in the following countries: Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama. The aim of this project is to promote a better knowledge of international labour standards as a tool for dispute settlement and to enhance the capacity of judges and legal practitioners to resolve labour disputes by referring to the international labour standards in question.

81. The Subregional Office in Brazil has been providing technical support to the Brazilian Government in the preparation of the National Decent Work Agenda that has been launched officially by the Ministry of Labour. Moreover, the Subregional Office held tripartite regional consultations, which led to the approval of the Hemispheric Decent Work Agenda during the Americas Regional Meeting. The National Decent Work Agenda was formally presented during a plenary meeting of the National Social and Economic Development Council (CDES). The CDES will be responsible for promoting social dialogue on this agenda amongst the constituents. Since 2005, the International Relations Tripartite Commission of the Ministry of Labour and Employment has been holding, with ILO technical and financial support, preparatory meetings before every session of the International Labour Conference. In 2006, in addition to the general discussion on the agenda of the Conference, the Ministry of Labour requested the ILO to organize a technical discussion with labour inspectors and federal labour judges on the labour relations report, which was presented by an international expert. Besides better preparing the tripartite constituents and official observers for the Conference, these meetings have resulted in more in-depth discussion on the issues prior to the Conference. In fact, a second round has been planned for presenting the main results of the 95th Session of the Conference. The Office has actively promoted the update on the submission of Conventions and Recommendations through the Tripartite Committee on International Relations. Finally, the Seafarers' Identity Documents Convention (Revised), 2003 (No. 185) has been sent to Congress for ratification with the positive recommendation of the Tripartite Committee on International Relations.

82. The Subregional Office in Santiago undertook various consultations in relation to the Committee of Experts' comment on the application of Convention No. 29 in the Chaco region of Paraguay. Two labour inspectors took up office in the region, who are in close contact with the ILO Subregional Office. Furthermore, in Paraguay, in March 2006, a tripartite meeting took place in order to discuss social responsibility for risk prevention with a view to promoting a culture preventing hazards in the world of work. The meeting also discussed issues relating to the agricultural sector with a view to promoting Convention No. 184 on social security and health in agriculture. Upon the request of the Government of Uruguay, the Office supported a training programme for Ministry of Labour officials focusing on the importance of the reporting system and the reactivation of the tripartite commission established under Convention No. 144.

83. Bosnia and Herzegovina received important technical advice this year from the Subregional Office in Budapest which helped the country to fulfil its constitutional obligations in terms of reporting, submitting and replying to observations of supervisory bodies. First of all, a tripartite seminar on international labour standards and procedures was organized in May 2006 in Sarajevo involving government officials and social partners from state and entity levels; the seminar also addressed pending freedom of association cases. Secondly, technical advice was given to the Bosnia and Herzegovina delegation during the International Labour Conference in June 2006 helping them to address the Conference Committee on the Application of Standards. Thirdly, technical advice was given to Bosnia and Herzegovina on how to implement gender equality legislation. Finally, as a result of previous promotional work carried out by the Office, Bosnia and Herzegovina ratified Convention No. 144 in July 2006; the Office is working with them to create an appropriate mechanism for tripartite consultation at the national level. Government officials from the Ministry of Labour of Bulgaria were asked to inform the Committee of Experts about the activities of the recently established National Commission on Protection against Discrimination. They were advised how to implement Convention No. 144 on tripartite consultation while at the same time reply to the observations of the Committee of Experts. The promotional work done in Bulgaria under Convention No. 56 led to its ratification by Bulgaria in April 2006. The Subregional Office in Budapest gave technical advice to the Government of Estonia on the reform of the Labour Relations Act with respect to the issue of the right to strike under Convention No. 87. On 2 June 2006, Latvia completed the process of ratification of fundamental Conventions and ratified Conventions Nos. 29, 138 and 182, after efforts made by the ILO International Labour Standards Department and Subregional Office in Budapest. Furthermore, it advised the Government of the Republic of Moldova on the field of labour administration; as a result the country ratified the Labour Administration Convention, 1978 (No. 150). The country received technical advice on the implementation of Conventions Nos. 138 and 182. Finally, Romania received technical advice on reforming legislation on workers' and employers' organizations while taking into consideration the provisions of international labour law relating to freedom of association and collective bargaining. Technical advice was provided to the Government on how to bring the Act on labour disputes into line with the observations of the Committee of Experts. Technical advice was given to Serbia on how to report on the implementation of ratified Conventions and on the functioning of the supervisory system of international labour standards.

84. In Armenia, a one-day tripartite seminar on standards-related procedures was organized by the Subregional Office in Moscow at the request of the Government for some 40 participants. It was followed by a three-day in-depth review of the reporting obligations, which involved officials of the Ministry of Labour and Social Issues as well as representatives of the employers and workers, to whom detailed explanations were given on substantial and procedural requirements (October 2006). In Kazakhstan, a two-day seminar was organized to promote the ratification of the Safety and Health in Construction Convention, 1988 (No. 167). Primarily intended for the constituents of Kazakhstan, it benefited from the participation of high-ranking officials from Azerbaijan, Kyrgyzstan, Russian Federation, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, who were invited at the initiative of the Government of Kazakhstan (November 2006).

85. The Subregional Office in New Delhi pursued its activities in Pakistan, Nepal (IPEC bonded child labour) and India (women beneficiaries of bonded labour project elected in bodies of local governance), all related to previous Conference Committee discussions and Committee of Experts' comments concerning these States. The Subregional Office in New Delhi furthermore undertook a number of technical assistance activities based on the comments of the Committee of Experts. These include missions to Afghanistan (tripartite) and Pakistan. Three additional training missions for high-level civil servants and diplomats focused on child labour, bonded labour and the gender Conventions. The Office continued to follow up on problems with the preparation of reports by Afghanistan. It also undertook a mission to the Islamic Republic of Iran on the implementation of Convention No. 95 as a follow-up to the Conference Committee discussion in 2005. Technical assistance relating to freedom of association – Convention 87 – of civil servants, was provided to Nepal.

86. The Subregional Office in Bangkok organized a tripartite workshop in Malaysia in 2006 in which the various ILO supervisory and reporting mechanisms were explained. Technical advice was provided in respect of the comments of the Committee of Experts relating to Conventions Nos. 81, 95, 100, 138 and 144. In addition, the Subregional Office supported two workshops in Thailand in July and August 2006 to promote the ratification of the Occupational Safety and Health Convention, 1981 (No. 155). Moreover, a seminar was organized in Mongolia concerning the Promotional Framework on Occupational Safety and Health Convention, 2006 (No. 187) and Recommendation (No. 197); the Labour Inspection Convention, 1947 (No. 81); and the draft Mongolian Law on Occupational Safety and Health (26 September 2006). In China, two workshops were conducted for employers' organizations to train managers on the practical implications of the forced labour standards. In July, a two-day tripartite seminar was organized on Convention No. 155, which also highlighted the newly adopted Convention No. 187. Since then, the Government has confirmed on several occasions that the ratification process is on track. Furthermore, a significant number of advisory and promotional missions were undertaken in Viet Nam throughout the year to provide standards- and labour law-related assistance on forced labour, labour dispute settlement, migration for employment, and gender equality. Legislative bills on labour dispute settlement, migration for employment and gender equality were adopted, with the ILO being specifically commended by the National Assembly for its technical assistance. In August and November 2006, missions were fielded to the Lao People's Democratic Republic to advise the tripartite constituents on proposed changes to the Labour Law, 1994. A number of amendments involved the application of ratified and non-ratified international labour standards, and attention was drawn to them. Finally, a mission was undertaken to Seoul to provide advice on the March 2006 recommendations of the Governing Body in Committee on Freedom Association Case No. 1865; to provide advice on Convention No. 29 and Convention No. 105 at a tripartite seminar; and to review plans for ratification of international labour Conventions up until 2010. In July, an advisory mission was carried out concerning the right to organize of public servants and the issue of comfort women (comments of the Committee of Experts regarding Convention No. 29). The missions resulted in a commitment by the Ministry of Labour to move ahead with the ratification of Convention No. 29. In Cambodia, a series of advisory missions on the revision of the Labour Law, 1997, were undertaken in the second half of 2006. In May 2006, the standards specialist reviewed outstanding reporting obligations with Ministry staff, and failure to discharge these obligations was repeatedly raised with Ministry staff since then. Training on international labour standards was provided to trade unions representing workers in the informal economy, monitors of the ILO Better Factories Project and arbitrators serving on the Arbitration

Council. The Subregional Office and ILO projects in Cambodia have been actively involved in the promotion of collective bargaining in the context of minimum wage fixing for the garment industry.

Specific activities undertaken in collaboration with other international organizations concerning international labour standards

A. Collaboration in the field of standards

87. In the context of collaboration with other international organizations on questions concerning supervision of the application of international instruments relating to subjects of common interest, the United Nations, certain specialized agencies and other intergovernmental organizations with which the ILO has entered into special arrangements for this purpose, are being asked whether they have information on how Conventions are being applied. The list of the Conventions concerned and the international organizations that were consulted is as follows:

- Indigenous and Tribal Populations Convention, 1957 (No. 107): United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), Inter-American Indian Institute of the Organization of American States, United Nations, United Nations Centre for Human Rights, United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and World Health Organization (WHO);
- Radiation Protection Convention, 1960 (No. 115): International Atomic Energy Agency;
- Social Policy (Basic Aims and Standards) Convention, 1962 (No. 117): FAO, United Nations, United Nations Centre for Human Rights and UNESCO;
- Prevention of Accidents (Seafarers) Convention, 1970 (No. 134), and Merchant Shipping (Minimum Standards) Convention, 1976 (No. 147): International Maritime Organization (IMO);
- Rural Workers' Organisations Convention, 1975 (No. 141): FAO, United Nations and United Nations Centre for Human Rights;
- Human Resources Development Convention, 1975 (No. 142): UNESCO;
- Migrant Workers (Supplementary Provisions) Convention, 1975 (No. 143): United Nations, United Nations Centre for Human Rights, UNESCO and WHO;
- Nursing Personnel Convention, 1977 (No. 149): WHO;
- Indigenous and Tribal Peoples Convention, 1989 (No. 169): FAO, Inter-American Indian Institute of the Organization of American States, United Nations, United Nations Centre for Human Rights, UNESCO and WHO.

B. United Nations treaties concerning human rights

88. International labour standards and the provisions of the United Nations human rights treaties related to them are complementary and mutually reinforcing. The bodies established to supervise the application of United Nations treaties concerning human rights consider international labour standards and the comments made by the Committee of Experts and other ILO supervisory procedures in their work. This process is facilitated by the written reports and oral information that the Office regularly provides to these bodies, in accordance with existing arrangements with each of them.

89. Since the Committee's last session, activities have been undertaken in relation to the United Nations human rights treaty bodies responsible for supervising the application of the following instruments:

- the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;
- the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;
- the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women;
- the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination;
- the Convention on the Rights of the Child; and
- the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families.

90. The Office has established good working relations with all of these treaty bodies. It was represented at the annual meeting of chairpersons of United Nations human rights treaty bodies (June 2006) to discuss closer cooperation between these bodies and the ILO, with a focus on the ongoing efforts to reform the United Nations treaty body system.

91. As a result of these activities, the United Nations human rights treaty bodies continued to refer to information provided by the ILO and recommended measures that follow up the comments of the Committee of Experts and other ILO supervisory bodies. In some instances, the ratification of specific ILO Conventions was recommended. The Committee of Experts also follows the work of the United Nations human rights treaty bodies and takes their comments into consideration where appropriate. In recent years, this has particularly been the case in the areas of child labour, forced labour and discrimination.

92. The United Nations Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights adopted general comment No. 18 on Article 6 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (right to work) on 24 November 2005. A draft general comment on Article 9 of the Covenant (right to social security) was discussed during a day of general discussion in May 2006 in which experts of the International Labour Standards Department and the Social Security Department participated.

C. European treaties

European Code of Social Security and its Protocol

93. In accordance with the supervisory procedure established under Article 74(4) of the Code, and the arrangements made between the ILO and the Council of Europe, the Committee of Experts will again be called on to examine a number of reports on the application of the Code and, as appropriate, its Protocol. The Committee's conclusions on these reports will be sent to the Council of Europe. In addition, representatives of the ILO took part as technical advisers in the meeting of the Committee of Experts on Social Security held in Strasbourg (France) in May 2006. The application of the Code and the Protocol was examined on the basis of the conclusions of the ILO Committee of Experts, which were endorsed by the Committee of Experts on Social Security of the Council of Europe.

European Social Charter

94. In accordance with Article 26 of the European Social Charter, the ILO participates in an advisory capacity in the sessions of the European Committee of Social Rights responsible for supervising the application of the Charter and the revised Charter.

D. Other matters relating to human rights

95. The ILO attended the first session of the United Nations Human Rights Council and contributed to the Council's consultations concerning the establishment of a universal review mechanism. It also participated in the 58th Session of the United Nations Sub-Commission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights and continued its cooperation with United Nations special procedures on human rights. Since the Committee's last session, the Office has closely collaborated with the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous peoples, whose most recent report focuses on the gap between the adoption and enforcement of legislation concerning indigenous peoples (E/CN.4/2006/78) and also refers to Convention No. 169 and the work of the Committee of Experts.

Country profiles

The following country profiles provide information on the ratification and application of Conventions and on the submission of instruments adopted by the Conference to the competent authorities in a table format by country.

The ratifications section indicates which fundamental Conventions, priority Conventions, and other Conventions a country has ratified as of 31 December 2006. It does not list Conventions which have been denounced or which are not in force.

The section on reports requested indicates how many reports were requested from the country in 2006 and how many were received. Under articles 22 and 35 of the ILO Constitution, member States are required to submit reports at regular intervals on the application of Conventions which they have ratified or declared applicable to their territories. If a report requested was a first detailed report (which is required following the ratification of a Convention), the number of the Convention appears in parentheses.

The section on observations made by employers' and workers' organizations indicates for which Conventions comments were received by such organizations on reports submitted to them by governments. Article 23 of the Constitution requires each member State to communicate to the representative employers' and workers' organizations copies of the information and reports communicated under articles 19 and 22.

The section concerning comments of the Committee of Experts indicates what comments the Committee made during its session in 2006. It lists either "observations", which are published in the report of the Committee of Experts, or "direct requests", which are not published, but are communicated directly to the governments concerned. The list does not include comments made by the Committee in previous sessions for which action by governments is still requested.

The section on submissions indicates the sessions of the International Labour Conference of which adopted instruments have, or have not, been submitted by governments to the authority or authorities competent to consider further action, as required under article 19 of the Constitution. The number of the Conventions, Recommendations or Protocols are given in parentheses, preceded by the letter "C", "R", or "P" as the case may be, when only some of the texts adopted at any one session have been submitted. When the ratification of a Convention was registered, that Convention and the corresponding Recommendation are considered as submitted.
