Equality at work: the continuing challenge – Global Report under the follow-up to the ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work. Report I (B)

WORKERS

The situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories. Report of the Director-General – Appendix

The report of last year's mission recalled that settlements are the primary cause of the depletion of natural resources and confiscation of Arab land, restrictions on access and movement, territorial fragmentation, planning policies that impede Arab development, and violent acts by Israeli settlers.

This year's report shows that, regrettably, the situation has not changed. The multitude of restrictions faced by workers and entrepreneurs in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan deprive the Palestinian people and the Syrian citizens of the occupied Syrian Golan of the opportunity to seek and obtain employment and prosperity in accordance with the freedom and rights enshrined in the Constitution of the ILO.

SOCIAL JUSTICE

A new era of social justice. Report of the Director-General – Report I (A)

This year, the ILO celebrates the 100th Session of the International Labour Conference. This report places squarely before the Conference some key issues confronting the ILO as it approaches its centenary in 2019.

These are the result of an inefficient growth pattern that has increased inequality throughout the world over the last 30 years. The task before was to continue to work together to construct effective responses to these challenges. The eight years to 2019 will be of tremendous importance and responsibility for ILO; a demanding period, just as the last 92 years provide a rich source of experience, lessons, and inspiration.

GENDER EQUALITY

Gender equality and social dialogue in India

The study provides valuable information on India's progress to improve its equal employment opportunities for women and men through its legislation, policies, and social dialogue. Notwithstanding several achievements, the Indian society is still marred by inequality, in particular based on gender and social origin.

This paper is a part of a comparative research project whose objective is to demonstrate that gender equality and social dialogue are mutually beneficial and their promotion should go hand-in-hand.

Gender-based violence in the world of work: overview and selected annotated bibliography

Gender-based violence both reflects and reinforces inequalities between women and men. At least one in three women around the world is estimated to have been coerced into sex, physically beaten and/or otherwise abused in her lifetime. The report provides an overview of ILO's own research and policy development on gender-based violence within its mandate, namely across the world of work, as well as good practices from operational activities. A concluding section highlights some trends and challenges that emerged during the literature review, as well as opportunities identified to step up efforts for preventing and eradicating gender-based violence in the world of work.

WOMEN AND LABOUR MARKET

Women and labour markets in Asia: rebalancing for gender equality

This report provides an overview and trend analysis of available information on where and how women work, and under what conditions, before, during, and after the recent crisis as well as in the current recovery. It aims to offer evidence-based policy recommendations on strategies to advance gender equality through addressing persistent gender labour market gaps, which could contribute to strong, balanced, and sustainable development in the region. In particular, it delivers key messages on the importance of directing policy towards the informal economy in the context of inclusive growth, underpinned by sufficient decent work opportunities.

The CSEC pilot survey adopted the sample design for household surveys being conducted by the Philippine National Statistics Office (NSO) with
