Time-use surveys and statistics in Asia and the Pacific: A review of challenges and future directions

Time-use statistics are critical for measuring and analyzing the quality of life and general well-being. They offer a more comprehensive measurement of all forms of work, including unpaid work and non-market production. They provide reliable data for evidence-based policy advocacy, contributing to policy dialogues and measures towards gender equality.

Inception report for the global commission on the future of work

The ILO's Future of Work Centenary Initiative allows us to take a step back, providing the space to reflect on the profound challenges that lie ahead and how the ILO with its member States can best meet them and develop the future we want as we enter our second century. The Global Commission lies at the heart of this Initiative. The national dialogues in 110 of our member States, which preceded the Commission's work and whose results are now synthesized in a report, provide a rich discussion of priorities, challenges and opportunities at the national and international levels.

Building Human Capital through Labor Migration in Asia

Building human capital through labor migration in Asia

The report outlines the trends in labor migration within Asia and between Asia and other –particularly OECD –countries. It also reviews the links between migration and human capital development and includes an overview of national initiatives and bilateral agreements on this issue. A review of the evidence on the impact of migration on family members “left behind” focuses on the health and education of children in households with a missing, migrant parent.

Violence at work.
World of Work: The magazine of the ILO Special 2018 issue

This year's 107th International Labour Conference (ILC) will tackle violence and harassment against women and men in the world of work. While workplace violence can differ depending on a country's development level, the most common forms occur everywhere. In the poorest countries, unacceptable practices are often exacerbated by poverty. We looked at the situation in Madagascar.

Asian Development Bank sustainability report 2018: Investing for an Asia and the Pacific free of poverty

Sustainability has always been one of the cornerstones of the operations of the Asian Development Bank (ADB).

These support inclusive economic and environmentally sustainable growth, and promote regional integration, including investment in regional public goods. Part of this is our commitment to practice what we advocate in our headquarters and in all our field offices. ADB continuously pursues initiatives and employs best practices that help to optimize the use of resources, prevent pollution, and reduce waste at its headquarters.
