Working on a warmer planet: The effect of heat stress on productivity and decent work

This report shows the impact of heat stress on productivity and decent work for virtually all countries in the world. It presents innovative solutions based on social dialogue to promote occupational safety and health for the most vulnerable groups of workers.

By 2030, the equivalent of more than 2 per cent of total working hours worldwide is projected to be lost every year, either because it is too hot to work or because workers have to work at a slower pace.

Addressing impunity:
A review of the three
monitoring mechanisms

Addressing impunity: A review of the three
monitoring mechanisms

The Review recommended ways and next steps to address the remaining gaps and issues in terms of policy and practice. A concrete way forward which this Review can facilitate would be a broad dialogue among the tripartite and multisectoral partners tackling the recommendations on how to improve the effectiveness of the monitoring and investigative mechanisms in addressing impunity in the country.

The impact of trade on employment in the Philippines: Country
report

The report presents how trade policies have impacted decent work outcomes in the Philippines, and how, based on empirical data and evidence, the links between trade policy and decent work principles can be strengthened so that benefits more Filipinos. In the absence of an integrated approach in trade and employment policies, a country is unlikely to achieve inclusive growth; sustainable and equitable development; and decent, gainful, and productive employment for all.
