Project on Converging against Child Labour: Support for India’s Model

Background of Convergence Project

The 2001 Census estimates there are 12.6 million children (between the ages of 5 to 14 years) engaged in economic activities, either as marginal or main workers. The causes of child labour include poverty, lack of access to quality education, gender discrimination, large family size among others. Children work in a number of occupations, many of them harmful to their physical, psychological and moral well-being. During the last two decades, the Government of India has put into place an enabling environment for the elimination of child labour. This includes policy and legislative measures as well as schemes and programmes launched in conjunction with state governments, partners including NGOs and international bodies such as the ILO.

The Convergence Project was developed in response to a need articulated by partners. It has been increasingly felt that Elimination of Child Labour needs concerted action on the part of several Ministries and Departments and Social Partners. The Project would seek to build on the good practices and lessons learnt from previous child labour projects implemented by the Government of India and the ILO and attempt to develop a holistic and replicable model for Elimination of Child Labour.

The model further calls for:

- Building on existing structures, schemes and programmes rather than establishing new ones. This would require action to complement features of major national programmes like the NCLP, SDIS, SSA, NREGS, poverty alleviation and health programmes and ensure that their benefits impact child labourers and their families.
- A family centered approach, where educational rehabilitation of the child is accompanied by the economic upliftment of the family.

Geographical Coverage

The Project would be implemented in two districts each:

- Bihar (Katihar and Sitamarhi)
- Gujarat (Surat and Vadodara)
- Jharkhand (Ranchi and Sahibganj)
- Madhya Pradesh (Jabalpur and Ujjain)
- Orissa (Cuttack and Kalahandi)
