All Hands in Kenya: Advancing Labour Standards through Cooperative Action, is a four-year project (1 December 2020 - 1 December 2024) funded by The Bureau of International Labor Affairs, through U.S. Department of Labor.

The project aims at providing technical assistance to projects in Kenya to improve compliance with international labor standards and acceptable conditions of work (ACW), specifically within the tea and textile sectors, and is guided with three outcomes:

• Increased government effectiveness in improving compliance with international labor standards and ACW—including but not limited to, improved compliance with Kenyan laws related to and consistent with those standards and conditions as well as technical assistance requested towards reforming laws that are inconsistent with those standards and conditions.

• Increased employers’ actions to improve compliance with Kenyan laws related to and consistent with those standards and conditions.

• Increased engagement of civil society organizations including workers’ organizations, with government and employers; to improve compliance with International Labor Standards (ILS), ACW, and Kenyan laws related to and consistent with those standards and conditions.

In collaboration with the tripartite partners, different government departments, players in the Tea and textile sectors, County Government entities responsible for labour law enforcement; the project will:

• Assess domestic law and practice against international labour standards and ACW, with recommendations for improvement.

• Support the Labour inspectors to be able to effectively promote compliance with the law as aligned with Kenyan Law, international labour standards and ACW.

• Develop and roll out an electronic case management system.

• Improve compliance with Labour law in the textile and tea sectors through the Strategic Compliance Intervention Model.

• Improve social dialogue and tripartite relations to promote mutual understanding of labour rights and responsibilities.

• Increase access to judicial and non-judicial remedies related to international labour standards and ACW.

• Improve government capacity to promote ILS and ACW in trade negotiations.

• Model procedures for workplace cooperation and workplace-level grievance-handling.

• Increase the awareness among employers of the benefits of compliance with ILS and ACW, the use of permanent positions over causal workers, and the needs of vulnerable workers.

• Support trade unions and civil society organizations to be able to represent and advocate effectively for workers through capacity strengthening and mentorship programs.

• Support workers to develop a procedure to ensure they engage in workplace cooperation to promote more productive industrial relations and to handle grievance.

Funding is provided by the United States Department of Labor under cooperative agreement number IL - 35632. 100 percent of the total costs of the project or program is financed with federal funds, for a total of 3,000,000 dollars.
