NINETEENTH ITEM ON THE AGENDA

Report of the Director-General*First Supplementary Report: XVIII World Congress on Safety and Health at Work and the Safety and Health Summit

(Seoul, Republic of Korea,
29 June–2 July 2008)

1. The Governing Body, at its 301st Session in March 2008, decided to send a tripartite delegation to the XVIII World Congress on Safety and Health at Work and the Safety and Health Summit (Seoul, Republic of Korea, 29 June–2 July) jointly organized by the International Labour Office, the International Social Security Association (ISSA) and the Korea Occupational Safety and Health Agency (KOSHA). The high-level Safety and Health Summit was held on 29 June prior to the opening of the World Congress and provided a platform for debate on ways further to promote occupational safety and health worldwide.
2. The Summit brought together 46 influential leaders and decision-makers involved in the enhancement of occupational safety and health; among them were Ms S. Pillai (representing the Government group of the Governing Body), Sir Roy Trotman (Worker Vice-Chairperson of the Governing Body) and Mr T. Suzuki (representing the Employers' group of the Governing Body) as well as Mr A. Diop (Executive Director, Social Protection Sector). Other participants included ministers of labour, representatives of employers' and workers' organizations, top managers of multinational enterprises, occupational safety and health authorities and institutes, and social security institutions.
3. Based on a review of the latest developments and the current situation in safety and health, the Summit resulted in a political accord on the value of safe and healthy workplaces in the form of the Seoul Declaration on Safety and Health at Work (appendix). The Declaration was unanimously adopted and signed by the Summit participants as a commitment to placing occupational safety and health high on national and international agendas. The Declaration provides practitioners with a powerful tool in mobilizing political support to realize occupational safety and health objectives.

4. The World Congress provided an outstanding opportunity for safety and health dialogue for over 4,500 participants, 1,800 of whom were from international backgrounds. The ILO opened the plenary session with a video message from the Director-General, followed by a keynote presentation recounting the recent advances and emerging issues in the field of occupational safety and health. Thereafter, a number of parallel sessions were held. These included technical sessions, regional meetings and symposia covering an array of occupational safety and health concerns. The various sessions proved to be an opportunity to share knowledge and scientific research enabling further international collaboration on safety and health. The Congress ended with an invitation from the representative of the Turkish Government to meet in Istanbul, Turkey in 2011 for the XIX World Congress on Safety and Health at Work.

Geneva, 3 October 2008.

Appendix

Seoul Declaration on Safety and Health at Work

The Safety and Health Summit

Having met in Seoul, Republic of Korea, on 29 June 2008 on the occasion of the XVIII World Congress on Safety and Health at Work, jointly organized by the International Labour Office, the International Social Security Association (ISSA) and the Korea Occupational Safety and Health Agency (KOSHA), with the participation of senior professionals, employers' and workers' representatives, social security representatives, policy-makers and administrators.

Recognizing the serious consequences of work-related accidents and diseases, which the International Labour Office estimates lead to 2.3 million fatalities per year world-wide and an economic loss of 4 percent of global Gross Domestic Product (GDP),

Recognizing that improving safety and health at work has a positive impact on working conditions, productivity and economic and social development,

Recalling that the right to a safe and healthy working environment should be recognized as a fundamental human right and that globalization must go hand in hand with preventative measures to ensure the safety and health of all at work,

Recognizing the importance of the instruments on safety and health at work of the International Labour Organization (ILO) and the substantial role of the ISSA and its members' contribution in implementing these instruments,

Recalling that the promotion of occupational safety and health and the prevention of accidents and diseases at work is a core element of the ILO's founding mission and of the Decent Work Agenda,

Recalling that the prevention of occupational risks and the promotion of workers' health constitute an essential part of the ISSA's mandate and of its Conceptual Framework of Dynamic Social Security,

Recognizing the importance of education, training, consultation and the exchange of information and good practices on prevention and the promotion of preventative measures,

Recognizing the important role played by governments and the social partners, professional safety and health organizations and social security institutions in promoting prevention and in providing treatment, support and rehabilitation services,

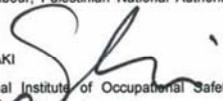

Recognizing the importance of cooperation among international organizations and institutions,
Welcoming progress achieved through international and national efforts to improve safety and health at work,

Declares that

1. Promoting high levels of safety and health at work is the responsibility of society as a whole and all members of society must contribute to achieving this goal by ensuring that priority is given to occupational safety and health in national agendas and by building and maintaining a national preventative safety and health culture.
2. A national preventative safety and health culture is one in which the right to a safe and healthy working environment is respected at all levels, where governments, employers and workers actively participate in securing a safe and healthy working environment through a system of defined rights, responsibilities and duties, and where the principle of prevention is accorded the highest priority.
3. The continuous improvement of occupational safety and health should be promoted by a systems approach to the management of occupational safety and health, including the development of a national policy taking into consideration the principles in Part II of the ILO Occupational Safety and Health Convention, 1981 (No. 155).
4. Governments should
  - Consider the ratification of the ILO Promotional Framework for Occupational Safety and Health Convention, 2006 (No. 187) as a priority, as well as other relevant ILO Conventions on safety and health at work and ensure the implementation of their provisions, as a means to improve national performance on safety and health at work in a systematic way.
  - Ensure that continued actions are taken to create and enhance a national preventative safety and health culture.
  - Ensure that the occupational safety and health of workers is protected through an adequate and appropriate system of enforcement of safety and health standards, including a strong and effective labour inspection system.
5. Employers should ensure that
  - Prevention is an integral part of their activities, as high safety and health standards at work go hand in hand with good business performance.
  - Occupational safety and health management systems are established in an effective way to improve workplace safety and health.
  - Workers and their representatives are consulted, trained, informed and involved in all measures related to their safety and health at work.
6. Affirming the workers' right to a safe and healthy working environment, workers should be consulted on safety and health matters and should:
  - Follow safety and health instructions and procedures, including on the use of personal protective equipment.
  - Participate in safety and health training and awareness-raising activities.
  - Cooperate with their employer in measures related to their safety and health at work.
7. The World Congress on Safety and Health at Work is an ideal forum to share knowledge and experiences in achieving safe, healthy and productive workplaces.
8. Progress made on achieving safety and health at work should be reviewed on the occasion of the XIX World Congress on Safety and Health at Work in 2011.
9. The Summit participants commit to taking the lead in promoting a preventative safety and health culture, placing occupational safety and health high on national agendas.
