CHILD LABOUR IN KYRGYZSTAN

Kyrgyzstan is among the countries in Central Asia seriously affected by the Worst Forms of Child Labour (WFCL). Children work in almost all sectors of industry, as well as in cotton, tobacco, and rice plantations and in the provision of various services (car washing, shoes cleaning, transportation of carriages in the markets, etc). The prevalence of WFCL has disastrous consequences on the safety, education, health and overall well being of children.

According to the first National Child labour Survey in Kyrgyzstan conducted by the National Statistical Committee in 2007 with ILO technical and financial assistance, 592,000 children out of an estimated 672,000 children in employment are involved in work unsuitable for their capacities as children. Thus, child labourers account for 88.1 percent of children in employment and 40.3 percent of all children aged 5-17. In line with the high prevalence of the work among boys than girls, boys account for 57.9 percent of child labourers. The overwhelming majority of child labourers are employed as unpaid family workers (95 percent). They are mostly involved in the sector of home production (76.4 percent), which usually involves agricultural work. Children mainly work together with other household members to sustain the household. An analysis of the work environment found that 21.3 percent of children in employment are exposed to different hazards at workplaces. Most of them (74.6 percent) are exposed to dust/fumes, 35.7 percent to extreme heat or cold and 15 percent to gas or open flames. Children were also found to work with dangerous tools, carry heavy loads, operate machinery or heavy equipment, etc.

An initial study undertaken by the ILO in 2001 and a recent Rapid Assessment Survey "Child Labour in agriculture and trade in Kyrgyzstan" (2006), identified less children involved in trade, services, housework, informal mining and constructions than in agriculture. Children are often employed to transport goods, load and unload goods and baggage, sell small items from portable stands, and collect bottles and empty boxes. Other children performing household duties are in effect servants. They do the washing and cleaning, serve at the table, stock up on firewood and work in the garden. The specific feature of child domestic work is that the relationships of employer and employee overlap with family relationships. Parents often hire their children out to relatives living in urban areas, in order to protect them from harsh living conditions in the rural areas. These children are not paid, but as servants and baby-sitters are provided with food, clothing and money for school. Children also work in repair shops, bakeries, cafes and restaurants.

Increasing equal access to and opportunities for education are key steps in tackling child labour. According to ILO Global Jobs Pact,¹ part of the response to the crisis should be given to achieving basic education for all children. Even though the numerical or quantitative indicators of development of the country's education system are quite impressive, the qualitative indicators show a different story. According to a study on school non-attendance undertaken by UNICEF in 2007,² the number of children not covered by elementary and secondary schools is about 38.2 thousand. The main reason of school non-attendance is family related (64 percent) and it includes lack of money to buy clothes and school supplies (22.5 percent), participation of children in agricultural work (20.5 percent) and other types of child labour (19 percent).

This is caused mainly by an increase in the expenses of the families for their children's education. Families cannot cover the costs related to secondary education and even less for higher education (textbooks and writing materials, Internet services, books, clothes, shoes, food, etc.). Lacking the necessary income, families have to refocus their efforts to meet their immediate needs, which often means giving less attention to educating their children. Moreover, most of the families do not understand the need for higher education, which is why they do not see the value in paying for an education that they can not even afford. At the same time, secondary schools

STRATEGIC COMPONENTS

The ILO's International Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour (IPEC) has been working in Kyrgyzstan since 2005 with the purpose to provide technical and financial assistance to eliminate the worst forms of child labour and to implement the ILO's child labour conventions: Minimum Age Convention (1973) No. 138 and Worst Forms of Child Labour Convention (1999) No. 182. IPEC activities in Kyrgyzstan were funded by the US Department of Labour and German Government under a common programming framework Programme on Action against Child labour and Trafficking in children in the Central Asian Region (PROACT CAR) that also includes Kazakhstan and Tajikistan.³

SPIF Workshop, November 2005.

In order to ensure a coherent approach and the ownership of the national stakeholders, the activities at country level have been defined in 2005 during a stakeholder driven planning exercise based on the Strategic Planning Impact Framework (SPIF) methodology.

Since December 2005, IPEC Kyrgyzstan has focused its activities on the following areas:

- ▶▶ Building the knowledge base on the WFCL.
- ▶▶ Awareness raising and dissemination of information on child labour.

³ Due to the international boycott of the Uzbek cotton as well as of the controversy in the position of Uzbekistan on child labour in cotton sector, IPEC suspended its activities in Uzbekistan in August 2008.

- ▶▶ Enhancing the capacity of professionals and national institutions on the WFCL at all levels.
- ▶▶ Advocacy to bring legislation, policy and institutional framework in line with international commitments on child labour.
- ▶▶ Support to target interventions for prevention of children to enter child labour, withdrawal and rehabilitation of child labourers.
- ▶▶ Creating linkages and networks to support prevention and elimination of child labour.
- ▶▶ Promotion of youth and adult employment.

BUILDING THE KNOWLEDGE BASE

IPEC interventions in Kyrgyzstan have been based on the following research and studies:

AWARENESS RAISING

IPEC Kyrgyzstan has conducted systematic and comprehensive awareness raising campaigns at national and local levels. The focus is on raising the awareness of government officials and institutions, social partners, parents, children and the general public. The project supports the production and free broadcasting of radio and TV programmes, documentaries on child labour, dissemination of booklets, leaflets, posters, etc. IPEC has supported the production of three documentaries on child labour.

World Day Against Child Labour – 12 June

At the national level, the World Day Against Child Labour (WDACL) provides an opportunity to gain further support of the Government and that of the ILO social partners, civil society and others, such as schools, youth groups and the media, in the campaign against child labour. The idea of embarking on the World Day as an opportunity to raise the visibility of the child labour problem and to highlight the effort made in combating it first came out from the discussions held between IPEC and the Ministry of Labour and Social Development of the Kyrgyz Republic in 2005. Since then, IPEC jointly with the partners use this opportunity to increase the awareness of the general public on child labour through creative initiatives targeting children and policy makers.

WDACL 2006 was dedicated to the launch of the second Global Child Labour Report, The end of child labour: Within reach. On 12 June, a concert “Stars of Kyrgyzstan against child labour” that lasted over three hours was organized in the main “Ala-Too” square of Bishkek with participation of Government representatives, and 13 local popular artists and bands. The representatives of the Secretariat of the National Council on Issues of Women, Family, Youth and Gender Development of the Kyrgyz Republic President’s Administration, Ministry of Labour and Social Development, Municipality of Bishkek, State Labour Inspection had speeches in the opening of the concert.

World Day Against Child Labour activities.

On the occasion of the WDACL 2007, during a ten-day period, from 2-12 June, a branded bus with the slogan “Harvest for the future: Agriculture without child labour” has been running in four Oblasts (regions) of the Kyrgyz Republic visiting nine provinces, the areas where cotton, tobacco, rice and other crops are cultivated and provided information on child labour hazards. 31 picture-cards (figures) depicting children picking up cotton, threading tobacco leaves, loading cargos, selling goods, cleaning shoes were placed in the central crossroads and the busiest places (supermarkets, recreation areas, boulevards) in Bishkek, Talas, Osh and Jalalabat cities together with the inscription

“12 June. Coming soon...”. The “figures” were also placed in front of the main entrances of Regional State Administrations in Talas, Osh and Jalalabat Oblasts. Children have been sketched out and displayed from 27 May to 15 June. On 12 June, the inscription was changed into “12 June - The World Day Against Child Labour”. In addition, a campaign was covered by the media broadcasting a short video and radio jingles (20-30 seconds) on child labour.

Meeting with the Minister of Labour.

WDACL 2008 “Education: the right response to child labour” was marked by organizing an open doors day for working children in vocational education and training (VET) institutions in Bishkek and holding a press conference with the participation of the key stakeholders.

On 11-12 June 2009, working children with their parents visited several central and local authorities in order to remind them about the importance of education and the necessity to combat child labour. Children visited the Ministry of Labour, Ministry of Education, State Agency on Vocational Education and Training, State Agency on Physical Development and Culture, Youth Policy and Children Protection, Bishkek Mayor’s Office, etc.

CAPACITY BUILDING EFFORTS

In order to effectively address child labour in Kyrgyzstan and ensure the sustainability of the efforts, IPEC contributed to strengthening the technical skills and capacity of the following institutions and groups of professionals:
