CODIFICATION OF THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE OF THE STATE OF ERITREA

Under instructions from the Government of Eritrea, the Ministry of Justice, to which the drafting and codification of laws is entrusted under Article 2(4)(5) of Legal Notice 14/1993, initiated the drafting process of the Criminal Procedure Code by assembling a team of international experts in the field of criminal procedure to work in tandem with the Law Reform Committee composed of Eritrean legal professionals.

The meetings, correspondences, studies and references to the experiences of other nations that followed produced an initial draft Criminal Procedure Code. The Ministry of Justice then convened all professional and institutional stakeholders engaged in the administration of the criminal procedure in order to solicit opinions and comments on the draft document. A series of meetings were subsequently held with judges, public prosecutors, attorneys, law lecturers, police officers and other legal professionals to deliberate on the proposed Criminal Procedure Code.

The second stage of the drafting process included a further review, in consultation with pertinent stakeholder, of the draft Code especially from the perspective of problems and challenges in the practice of criminal procedure in Eritrea. Some key amendments were thus introduced before a completed version of the Criminal Procedure Code of Eritrea was presented.

The Criminal Procedure Code basically follows the adversarial system. It seeks to ensure the protection of the basic rights of the accused from the moment of the reporting of an offence through to the award of final judgment and balance such rights with the interests of the public who are duly represented in the criminal procedure. As with all laws, this Criminal Procedure Code will continue to be amended from time to time to accommodate new conditions.

The drafting and review process of the Criminal Procedure Code of the State of Eritrea was long and demanding, but all efforts and resources spent all along the process have at last been rewarded by this, the Criminal Procedure Code of the State of Eritrea.

PRELUDE

The laws of criminal procedure are introduced to preserve the balance, throughout the process from the reporting of an offence through to the final judgment, between the fundamental rights due to the accused and the interests of the public in the criminal process. That any person suspected or accused of a crime is to be presumed innocent until proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt; that he (she) is to be insulated from unwarranted investigation and prosecution; that, as needed, select persons shall always be assisted by counsel; that due process be given the accused in the investigation, prosecution and trial stages in a speedy and just manner are some of the rights that all persons suspected of accused of any offence under Eritrean laws are accorded. The Code will simultaneously accommodate the interests of the public through the establishment of clearly demarcated lines of function, authority and relationship among the various institutions that represent the interest of the public in the criminal process, viz. the courts, the prosecution department, the police, the prison authorities and other similarly constituted organs, by also allowing the public, especially the alleged victims of crimes, in actively participating in the overall objective of prevention and swift prosecution of offences.

The Transitional Criminal Procedure Code of Eritrea, most of the provisions of which have been incorporated into this Code, has thus far served as the testing ground for the establishment of the criminal procedure that we have always believed is deserved by the people and inhabitants of Eritrea. The experience earned in the practice of the Transitional Criminal Procedure Code of Eritrea and the practices of other jurisdictions was instrumental in designing this Code. An effort was also exerted in incorporating some acceptable and basic principles and perspectives in the age-long indigenous laws, traditions and practices similarly extant in the various communities of the Eritrean people as are related to criminal procedure.

The enactment and active functioning of this Code assumes the further institutionalization under law of the various organs of adjudication and law enforcement as well as the continued and enhanced public awareness of the basic tenets of Eritrean criminal law and procedure. To function in tune with the Penal Code and other relevant regulations of Eritrea, this Criminal Procedure Code of the State of Eritrea will ensure the aggregated objectives of ensuring peaceful and secured life under law, the prevention of and willingness to fight crime as well as the just treatment of offenders.
