PENAL CODE

To provide for criminal offences and the punishments therefore, principles of criminal law, criminal responsibility and matters connected therewith.

PART 1 – GENERAL PROVISIONS

Application of the Criminal Law

1. Offences within Republic

(1) The criminal law of the Republic shall apply to any act done or omitted within its territory.

(2) For the purposes of this Code, the territory of the Republic shall include its territorial waters and the airspace above the territory and waters, and all civil vessels and aircraft registered in the Republic:

Provided that no person aboard a foreign civil vessel or aircraft may be tried for an offence committed on board such vessel or aircraft within the territory of the Republic if the Public Prosecutor is satisfied that the offence may be dealt with fairly and in a manner not contrary to public policy in the Republic under the foreign law or regulations governing such vessel or aircraft.

2. Offences partly or wholly abroad

The criminal law of the Republic shall apply –

- (a) to any offence of which an element has taken place within the territory of the Republic;
- (b) to any offence against the external security of the Republic or of counterfeiting the current money of the Republic, wherever committed:

Provided that no alien may be tried for an offence against the criminal law of the Republic solely by virtue of this section unless he has been arrested within the territory of the Republic or has been extradited to it.

3. Complicity and attempts

The criminal law of the Republic shall apply –

- (a) to any act or omission within the territory of the Republic constituting complicity or attempt in relation to an offence against the criminal law of the Republic beyond such territory which is also an offence punishable by the law of the place in which it is or is intended to be committed;
- (b) to any such act or omission beyond its territory in relation to an offence or intended offence within its territory.

4. Offences abroad

(1) Any citizen may be prosecuted within the Republic for an offence against the criminal law of the Republic in respect of any act or omission committed by him beyond the Republic which had it been committed within the Republic would have constituted an offence against such law, if such act or omission constituted a corresponding offence under the law of the place where it was committed.

(2) The penalty imposed upon conviction of a person under subsection (1) shall not be more severe than the corresponding penalty prescribed by the law of the place in which the act or omission was committed.

(3) Subsection (1) shall not apply if such person has been prosecuted in respect of such act or omission in the place in which it was committed, whatever the result of such prosecution.

(4) No criminal proceedings shall be brought against any person under the provisions of subsection (1) without the consent in writing of the Public Prosecutor.

5. International offences

(1) The criminal law of the Republic shall apply to piracy, hijacking of aircraft, traffic in persons, slave trading and traffic in narcotics committed within or beyond the territory of the Republic.

(2) No alien may be tried in the Republic for such an offence committed abroad unless he has been arrested in the Republic and his extradition has not been applied for, and the Public Prosecutor has consented in writing to his prosecution.

Principles of Criminal Law

6. Criminal intent, recklessness

(1) No person shall be guilty of a criminal offence unless he intentionally does an act which is prohibited by the criminal law and for which a specific penalty is prescribed. The act may consist of an omission, or a situation which has been created intentionally.

(2) No person shall be guilty of a criminal offence unless it is shown that he intended to do the very act which the law prohibits; recklessness in doing that act shall be equivalent to intention.

(3) A person shall be considered to be reckless if –

(a) knowing that there is a risk that an event may result from his conduct or that a circumstance may exist, he takes that risk; and

(b) it is unreasonable for him to take it having regard to the degree and nature of the risk which he knows to be present.

(4) A person shall not be guilty of a criminal offence if he is merely negligent, unless the crime consists of an omission. A person is negligent if he fails to exercise such care, skill or foresight as a reasonable man in his situation should exercise.

(5) No provision of law constituting a criminal offence shall be construed as dispensing with the necessity to prove the criminal intention of the accused, unless such construction is expressly stated or arises by necessary and distinct implication.

7. Consent as a defence

(1) It shall be no defence to any charge that the victim prior to the criminal act has expressed his consent to it, if the purpose of the act was to inflict serious physical or mental injury incompatible with the well-being of the victim.

(2) In other cases, the victim shall not be taken to have consented to a criminal act if by reason of his age or infirmity, or of fraud, he was incapable of or was prevented from forming the necessary consent.

8. General rule as to burden of proof

(1) No person shall be convicted of any criminal offence unless the prosecution shall prove his guilt according to the law beyond reasonable doubt by means of evidence properly admitted; the determination of proof of guilt beyond reasonable doubt shall exclude consideration of any possibility which is merely fanciful or frivolous.

(2) In determining whether a person has committed a criminal offence, the court shall consider the particular circumstances of the case and shall not be legally bound to infer that he intended or foresaw the natural or probable consequences of his actions.

(3) If the prosecution has not so proved the guilt of the accused, he shall be deemed to be innocent of the charge and shall be acquitted forthwith.

9. Burden of proof in certain cases

Unless otherwise expressly provided by law, the burden shall rest upon the prosecution to disprove beyond reasonable doubt any plea of provocation, compulsion, coercion, self-defence, necessity, consent, accident or mistake of fact which has been sufficiently raised by the defence as an issue.

10. Discharge of burden of proof by accused

If a person charged with the commission of a crime pleads any defence by which he may exculpate himself if he proves certain facts, it shall be sufficient for such person to prove the same on the balance of probabilities.

11. Ignorance of law or fact

(1) Ignorance of the law shall be no defence to any criminal charge.

(2) In all cases in which it is necessary for the accused to have knowledge of certain facts in order to form a criminal intention, the burden shall rest upon the prosecution to prove that the accused was aware of such facts.

(3) In the absence of direct evidence thereof, such knowledge may be proved by inference from other facts or circumstances.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed so as to validate any defect or omission in the publication of any law or enactment.

12. Mistake of fact, reasonable belief

A mistake of fact shall be a defence to a criminal charge if it consists of a genuine and reasonable belief in any fact or circumstance which, had it existed, would have rendered the conduct of the accused innocent.

Principles of Criminal Proceedings

13. Unfitness to plead

If any person charged with a criminal offence is by reason of insanity or other mental disorder unfit to plead or to stand trial, the court shall make an order placing him under guardianship in a manner to be prescribed in the order. The condition of the accused shall be established by a medical report ordered by the court.

14. Rights of accused at trial

Every accused person may, after the closure of evidence for the prosecution, elect to give evidence on oath on his own behalf or to remain silent. His election to remain silent shall not of itself give rise to an inference of guilt.

15. Limitation in criminal prosecutions

No prosecution may be commenced against any person for any criminal offence upon the expiry of the following periods after the commission of such offence –

- (a) in the case of offences punishable by imprisonment for more than 10 years – 20 years;
- (b) in the case of offences punishable by imprisonment for more than 3 months and not more than 10 years – 5 years;
- (c) in the case of offences punishable by imprisonment for 3 months or less or by fine only – 1 year.

Criminal Responsibility

16. Punishment and responsibility

(1) No penalty may be imposed except upon a person who is criminally responsible.

(2) Subject to any special provision of law, criminal responsibility shall attach to any person who intentionally commits each of the acts or omissions which are the elements of a criminal offence with the intention of causing the result which completes it.

17. Age of responsibility

(1) No child under the age of 10 years shall be capable of committing any criminal offence. A child of 10 years of age or over but under 14 years of age shall be presumed to be incapable of committing a criminal offence unless it is proved by evidence that he was able to distinguish between right and wrong and that he did so with respect to the offence with which he is charged.

(2) The age of a person prescribed by this section shall be his age at the time of the act or omission in question.

(3) For the purposes of this section and any other provision of criminal law, the age of a person shall be determined, in the absence of official civil status records, by the court upon the balance of probabilities, after hearing the evidence of a medical expert.

18. Liability of corporations

A corporation may be criminally liable to the same extent as a natural person, provided that the acts and intentions of its principals or responsible servants may be attributed to the corporation.

19. No vicarious liability

In all cases in which it is necessary to prove criminal intention, a person shall not be liable for the criminal act of another person, whether that person is his child, servant, employee, agent or merely a stranger.

20. Insanity

(1) Every person accused of a criminal offence shall be presumed sane until the contrary is proved; the burden of such proof shall lie upon the accused on the balance of probabilities.

(2) It shall be a defence to a criminal charge that the accused was at the time in question suffering from a defect of reason, due to a disease of the mind which rendered him incapable of appreciating the probable effects of his conduct. Such disease may consist of a mental disorder or deficiency which leads in relation to the criminal act to a complete deprivation of the reasoning power of the accused beyond a momentary confusion, absence of self-control or irresistible impulse. Any mental disorder which has manifested itself in violence and is prone to recur is sufficient. The disease need not be permanent or prolonged; a temporary loss of mental awareness shall constitute a sufficient defence.

(3) If the accused is found insane he shall be entitled to be acquitted. Notwithstanding such acquittal, the court may make an order for his confinement in a manner to be prescribed in its order.

(4) Involuntary intoxication shall for the purposes of the criminal law be deemed to be a mental disease.

21. Voluntary intoxication

(1) Voluntary intoxication shall not constitute a defence to any charge unless the offence charged is one in which criminal intention is an element and the intoxication was of so gross a degree as to deprive the accused of the capacity to form the necessary criminal intention; the onus of proof thereof on the balance of probabilities shall lie on the accused.

(2) For the purpose of this section, intoxication means the impairment of the mental or physical faculties of a person arising from the taking of any foreign substance.

22. Superior orders

No criminal responsibility shall attach to an act performed on the orders of a superior to whom obedience is lawfully due, unless such order was manifestly unlawful or the accused knew that the superior had no authority to issue such order.

23. Self-defence necessity, prevention of offences etc.

(1) No criminal responsibility shall attach to an act dictated by the immediate necessity of defence of the person acting or of another, or of any right of himself or another, against an unlawful action, provided that the means of defence be not disproportionate to the seriousness of the unlawful action threatened.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality thereof, subsection (1) shall apply to the intentional killing of another in defence of an attack causing a reasonable apprehension of death, grievous harm, rape or sodomy.

(3) No criminal responsibility shall attach to an act, not being an act to which subsection (1) applies, done in necessary protection of any right of property, in order to protect the person acting or another, or any property from a grave and imminent danger, provided that the means of protection used be not disproportionate to the severity of the harm threatened.

(4) No criminal responsibility shall attach to the use of such force as is reasonable in the circumstances for the purpose of –

- (a) preventing the commission of an offence (not being an offence against the person acting); or
- (b) effecting or assisting the lawful arrest of any offender or suspected offender or any person unlawfully at large.

24. Effect of diminished responsibility

Wherever criminal responsibility is diminished by law, the punishment shall be mitigated at the discretion of the Court.

25. Failure of plea of insanity

(1) If a plea of insanity fails, it shall be open to the court to find the accused guilty of the charge. The court may decide that the accused, although not insane within the meaning of section 20, was suffering from such abnormality of mind, whether arising from a condition of arrested or retarded development of mind or any inherent cause or induced by disease or injury, as diminished his responsibility for his acts.

(2) If an accused is found guilty but with such diminished responsibility, the court may make such order with respect to his custody and treatment as is necessary for the safety of others and his own well-being.

Diminution of Responsibility

26. Compulsion and coercion

(1) Criminal responsibility shall be diminished in the case of an offence committed by a person acting –

(a) under actual compulsion or threats, not otherwise avoidable, of death or grievous harm;

(b) under the coercion of a parent, spouse, employer or other person having actual or moral authority over such person.

(2) Criminal responsibility shall not be diminished under subsection (1) if the person acting has voluntarily exposed himself to the risk of such compulsion, threats or coercion.

27. Provocation

(1) Criminal responsibility shall be diminished in the case of an offence immediately provoked by the unlawful act of another against the offender or, in his presence, his spouse, descendant, ascendant, brother, sister, master or servant, or any minor or incapable person in his charge, provided that the reaction constituting the offence be not disproportionate to the degree of provocation.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (1), the intentional killing or wounding of another shall be deemed to be not disproportionate to provocation caused by violent blows or injuries.

(3) In order that criminal responsibility be diminished, provocation must be of such degree as to deprive a normal person of his self-control.

Attempts and Conspiracy

28. Attempts

(1) An attempt to commit a criminal offence is committed if any act is done or omitted with intent to commit that crime and such act or omission is a step towards the commission of that crime which is immediately connected with it, or would have been had the facts been as the offender supposed them to be.

(2) An attempt shall be committed notwithstanding that complete commission of the offence was impossible by reason of a circumstance unknown to the offender.

(3) Acts committed in mere preparation of an offence shall not constitute an offence.

(4) The commission of an attempted offence shall constitute an offence punishable in the same manner as the offence concerned.

(5) The criminal responsibility of a person committing an attempted offence who voluntarily withdraws from the attempt before the offence has been committed shall be diminished.

29. Conspiracy

(1) Conspiracy is an agreement, express or implied, between two or more persons to do an act which, if done, even by one person, would constitute a criminal offence.

(2) There can be no conspiracy between husband and wife.

(3) The criminal responsibility of a conspirator who voluntarily withdraws from the conspiracy before the commission of the offence shall be diminished.

(4) A conspiracy to commit a criminal offence shall be punishable only where expressly provided by any provision of law.

(5) No person shall be prosecuted as a conspirator without the consent in writing of the Public Prosecutor.

Participation in Criminal Offences

30. Complicity

Any person who aids, counsels or procures the commission of a criminal offence shall be guilty as an accomplice and may be charged and convicted as a principal offender.

31. Co-offenders

A co-offender shall mean a person who, in agreement with another, takes part with him in the commission of a criminal offence.

32. Punishment of accomplices and co-offenders

Subject to any express provision of law, an accomplice and a co-offender shall be punishable in like manner as a principal or sole offender.

33. Foreseeable consequences

Any accomplice or co-offender in the commission or attempted commission of an offence shall be equally responsible for any other offence committed or attempted as a foreseeable consequence of the complicity or agreement.

34. Accessory after the fact

(1) An accessory after the fact shall mean a person who, knowing or having reasonable cause to suspect that another person has committed a criminal offence, shelters such person or his accomplice from arrest or investigation, or has possession of or disposes of anything taken, misappropriated or otherwise obtained by means of the offence or used for the purpose of committing the offence.

(2) Subsection (1) shall have no application to any ascendant, descendant, sibling or the spouse of the person sheltered.

(3) An accessory after the fact shall be punished as a principal offender.

35. Inciting and soliciting commission of offence

It shall be unlawful to incite or solicit another person to commit any offence, whether or not that offence is committed. A person guilty of inciting or soliciting an offence may be charged and convicted as a principal offender.

36. Commencement of sentence

Where the offender has not been in custody pending trial and where no warrant of arrest or remand is issued against him at the time of judgment in the circumstances authorised by the rules of criminal procedure, no sentence of imprisonment may be enforced until the time for appeal against such sentence has expired or the offender earlier elects to begin serving his sentence.

37. Calculation of sentence

(1) In a sentence of imprisonment expressed in days, each day shall mean 24 hours.

(2) A sentence of imprisonment for 1 month shall mean imprisonment for 1 calendar month.

(3) Sentences expressed in months or years shall be reckoned by calendar date.

(4) Subject to section 41, the duration of a sentence of imprisonment shall include and run from –

(a) the day on which the offender was taken into custody under that sentence; or

(b) in the case of concurrent sentences passed on different dates, the day on which he was first taken into custody under any such sentence.

(5) In the case of the escape of a prisoner, the period in which he is unlawfully at liberty shall not be counted in the duration of the sentence.

38. Imprisonment of minors

(1) No person under 16 years of age shall be sentenced to imprisonment unless no other method of punishment is appropriate. Where any such person is sentenced to imprisonment, the court shall give its reason for so sentencing.

(2) An offender under the age of 16 years shall serve a sentence of imprisonment in a special establishment or, if no such establishment exists, shall be separated from offenders of 16 years of age and over.

39. Concurrent sentences the rule

(1) Where any person is convicted on more than one charge of an offence tried jointly, the respective sentences of imprisonment imposed for such offences shall be deemed to be concurrent sentences, unless the court shall otherwise order.

(2) Where any person is convicted on more than one such charge tried separately, any sentence later passed for an offence committed prior to the earlier trial, shall be deemed to run concurrently with any earlier sentence, unless the court shall otherwise order.

(3) No sentence may be ordered to run concurrently with a sentence which had already become final before the commission of the criminal offence in respect of which the second sentence is passed.

40. Consecutive sentences

Sentences of imprisonment shall be enforced in the order in which the warrants of imprisonment are notified to the offender.

41. Custody pending trial or appeal

(1) Where the offender has been in custody pending trial or appeal, the duration of such custody shall be wholly deducted from the computation of a sentence of imprisonment.

(2) Where the offender after having been in custody pending trial or appeal, is sentenced to a fine only, the court may relieve him wholly or in part of payment of the said fine.

42. Power of court to order offender to come up for sentence if called upon

(1) Any court by or before which any person is convicted of any offence, or before which any person appears for sentence, may, having regard to the circumstances, including the nature of the offence and the character of the offender instead of passing sentence, order the offender to appear for sentence if called upon to do so, on such conditions as the court thinks fit.

(2) The making of an order under this section shall not limit or affect the power of the court, under any enactment applicable to the offence, to make any order for the payment of costs, damages, or compensation, or for the restitution of any property, notwithstanding that the offender is not sentenced on conviction, and the provisions of every such enactment shall apply accordingly.

(3) Any person in respect of whom an order is made under this section may be called upon to appear for sentence within any period specified by the court in the order, being a period not exceeding 3 years from the date of the conviction, or, if no period is so specified, within 1 year from the date of the conviction.

(4) Where any person is brought up for sentence under this section, any judicial officer having jurisdiction to deal with offences of the same kind, whether or not he is the judicial officer before whom the case was heard, may, after inquiry into the circumstances of the case and the conduct of the offender since the order was made, sentence or otherwise deal with the offender for the offence in respect of which the order was made.

43. Power of court to discharge offender without conviction or sentence

(1) Where any person is accused of any offence, any court, after inquiry into the circumstances of the case, may in its discretion discharge that person without convicting him, unless by any enactment applicable to the offence a minimum penalty is expressly provided for.

(2) A discharge under this section shall be considered to be an acquittal.

(3) The court discharging any person under this section may, if it is satisfied that the charge is proved against him, make any order for the payment of costs, damages, or compensation, or for the restitution of any property, that it could have made under any enactment applicable to the offence with which he is charged if it had convicted and sentenced him, and the provisions of every such enactment shall apply accordingly.

(4) Nothing in this section shall affect the power of any court to convict and discharge any person.

44. Nature of periodic detention

(1) In any case in which a person convicted of a criminal offence may be sentenced to imprisonment for a limited term in accordance with any provision of law, the court may in its discretion sentence such person in place thereof to undergo periodic detention for a term of not less than 1 month and not more than 6 months.

(2) Periodic detention shall mean the loss of liberty of the offender for not more than 36 hours between Friday evening and Sunday evening in each consecutive week throughout the term for which such periodic detention has been imposed. During such sentence the offender shall be obliged to perform community work without remuneration for periods not exceeding 8 hours in each day.

While in detention for such periods, the offender shall be treated as far as local circumstances allow as though he were undergoing a sentence of imprisonment.

(3) In exercising its discretion under subsection (1) the court shall have regard to the nature of the offence, the age and circumstances of the offender including his occupation or employment, family circumstances, the prospects of his reformation and any other circumstances which it may consider relevant.

(4) If an offender sentenced to periodic detention shall fail on any occasion to surrender himself into custody, properly to perform the work he is directed to perform or to comply in any way with the terms of such sentence or the rules governing periodic detention, such sentence shall thereupon lapse and he shall be taken in custody before the same court to be sentenced afresh and he shall not thereafter be eligible for periodic detention.

45. Probation

(1) In any case where a sentence of imprisonment may be imposed, probation may be ordered in addition to or in place of any other sentence.

(2) The period of probation may be imposed for from 1 to 3 years.

46. Nature of probation

(1) Probation shall be granted upon general and, where appropriate, special conditions.

(2) The compliance of the offender with such conditions shall be supervised by a magistrate nominated in that behalf, with the assistance of honorary probation officers.

(3) The probation officer shall be chosen and may be replaced by the magistrate in charge of the case.

(4) The magistrate in charge of the case at the home district of the offender may at any time for reasons to be recorded in writing suspend all or any of the special conditions or may vary them so as to make them less onerous.

47. General conditions of probation

An offender on probation shall always be subject to the following general conditions –

- (a) to establish his residence in a given place;
- (b) to appear when called upon by the probation officer;
- (c) to receive visits from the probation officer and furnish all information and documents necessary for verifying his means of support;
- (d) to advise the probation officer in advance of any change of employment or residence and the reasons therefore;
- (e) to inform the probation officer of any intended absence of over 15 days and of his return;

- (f) to obtain the prior permission of the probation officer before any departure abroad.

48. Special conditions of probation

In addition to such general conditions imposed by section 47, the court may by its judgment subject the offender to any one or more of the following special conditions –

- (a) to take up residence in any specified place or places;
- (b) not to be present without special permission in any specified place or places;
- (c) to remain in employment or follow a course of instruction or vocational training;
- (d) to submit to measures of control or treatment including treatment in hospital, in particular for curing an addiction to alcohol or drugs;
- (e) to contribute to his family expenses or pay regularly any maintenance due by him;
- (f) to compensate any person for damage caused by his offence;
- (g) not to drive any motor vehicle or class of motor vehicle;
- (h) to avoid specified places or premises;
- (i) to abstain from wagering or excessive or any consumption of alcohol;
