

NINETY-THIRD SESSION

Judgment No. 2155

The Administrative Tribunal,

Considering the fifth complaint filed by Mr V. L. against the European Organisation for the Safety of Air Navigation (Eurocontrol Agency) on 1 February 2001, Eurocontrol's reply of 11 May, the complainant's rejoinder of 20 June and the Agency's surrejoinder of 21 September 2001;

Considering Article II, paragraph 5, of the Statute of the Tribunal;

Having examined the written submissions and decided not to order hearings, for which neither party has applied;

Considering that the facts of the case and the pleadings may be summed up as follows:

A. Facts relevant to this case are to be found in Judgment 1880 delivered on 8 July 1999, Judgment 2094 delivered on 30 January 2002 and in Judgments 2153 and 2154 also delivered this day. On the advice of his daughter's doctor, the complainant had her hospitalised in the United States for a serious illness. Eurocontrol's Sickness Fund repaid at the full rate (100 per cent) the costs of her operation and of the treatment that preceded it, except for the costs of the hospital stay which it limited to 20,000 Belgian francs per day. As from June 1997, however, the maximum limits set out in Rule of Application No. 10 of the Staff Regulations concerning sickness and accident insurance cover were strictly applied to all costs incurred after the operation.

On 29 November 1999 the complainant submitted a request for special reimbursement for the period from 8 September 1998 to 7 September 1999. On 26 June 2000 he filed an internal complaint against the implied rejection of this request. The internal complaint was examined by the Sickness Insurance Scheme Management Committee on 19 October and the complainant was informed by a letter of 23 October that the Committee had recommended its rejection. In a memorandum of 18 December 2000, the Director of Human Resources, on behalf of the Director General, dismissed the complainant's internal complaint. That is the impugned decision.

B. The complainant submits that the Sickness Fund, by refusing to grant him special reimbursements, even though no coefficient had been determined taking into account the difference in the cost of care in the United States and Belgium, is in breach of Article 8 of Rule No. 10, the provisions interpreting this Rule and several principles, including the free choice of practitioner. He adds that the refusal to grant a special reimbursement for medical expenses which, over a period of 12 months, exceeded the complainant's "average" basic monthly salary, on the sole grounds that they are considered "excessive", is in violation of Article 72 of the Staff Regulations and Article 8(2), of Rule No. 10, which contain no restriction or reservation of this ilk. He asserts that the proportion of medical expenses left at his charge was exorbitant. He takes the Sickness Fund to task for basing its reckoning on under-estimated Belgian rates and argues that his daughter could not have obtained equivalent care in Belgium. Lastly, he recalls that in Judgment 1880, under 13, the Tribunal recommended that the Agency ensure "that the interpretation does not rob the original rule - especially Article 72(3) - of its meaning".

The complainant seeks the quashing of the impugned decision and, accordingly, the granting of the special reimbursement of the medical expenses for the period from 8 September 1998 to 7 September 1999. He also claims costs.

C. In its reply, Eurocontrol explains that for non-member States, such as the United States, an equality coefficient of 100 is applied, meaning that medical expenses are reimbursed on the basis of the rates for equivalent care in Belgium. It denies ever having contested the complainant's right to the free choice of practitioner and argues that the issue, of whether or not the treatment available in the United States was indispensable, is immaterial - under the terms of the staff regulations and rules - to the complainant's right to the reimbursement of the expenses incurred. It submits that Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations and Article 8(2) of Rule No. 10 apply only to the non-reimbursed portion (15 or 20 per cent, as appropriate) of refundable medical expenses under the rules and not to non-reimbursed expenses in general (excessive costs or non-medical expenses). It affirms that, in the opinion of four doctors, the surgery and, a fortiori, the post-operative treatment of the complainant's daughter could have been carried out in Europe. The complainant's initial decision to have the operation done in the United States was taken for reasons of expediency and he may not rely on it to obtain special reimbursement from the Sickness Fund of all the treatment that ensued. It adds that, for the period under consideration - from 8 September 1998 to 7 September 1999 - "the amount, excluding the medical expenses considered excessive, remaining at the charge of the complainant, was ... 45,540 [Belgian francs]" and did not therefore exceed the threshold of 108,399 francs, corresponding to half of his basic monthly salary.

D. In his rejoinder the complainant maintains that the United States was the only place where his daughter could be treated, including after her operation. He submits that, contrary to the Agency's interpretation, Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations and Article 8(2) of Rule No. 10 do cover excessive costs. The whole purpose of the mechanism is to determine what should be done with the non-reimbursed portion of medical expenses when the financial burden on the staff member is abnormally heavy. The Tribunal acknowledged as much in Judgment 1880, under 13.

E. In its surrejoinder the Agency asserts that there would be no safeguarding the finances of the Sickness Insurance if its members were able to claim excessive medical expenses by way of special reimbursement. This is why, it says, the special reimbursement is always limited to medical expenses that are normally refundable under the rules, but which have remained at the charge of the member. For the period in question, it reiterates that the amount of the expenses which thus remained at the complainant's charge did not exceed half of his basic monthly salary and that the conditions set out in Article 8(2) of Rule No. 10 were not therefore fulfilled.

CONSIDERATIONS

1. Facts relevant to this dispute are set out in Judgment 1880, to which reference is made.

In his complaint filed on 1 February 2001, the complainant challenges the decision of 18 December 2000 in which the Director of Human Resources, on behalf of the Director General of Eurocontrol, dismissed his internal complaint of 26 June 2000 against the rejection of his claim for special reimbursement of medical expenses incurred for the period from 8 September 1998 to 7 September 1999 as a result of the hospitalisation in the United States of his daughter for a serious illness. This claim for special reimbursement had been submitted to the Sickness Fund on 29 November 1999, under Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations and Article 8(2) of Rule No. 10.

2. The complainant alleges, firstly, breach of Article 72 of the Staff Regulations, Article 8, paragraphs 1 and 2, of Rule No. 10 and the interpretation of Rule No. 10 set out in Section XV of Annex I to this Rule; and secondly, a clear misappraisal of facts and violation of the principles of the free choice of practitioner, non-discrimination, the guarantee of general social coverage, and proportionality by which the action of institutions must be governed, in view of the refusal by the Sickness Fund to grant the special reimbursements permitted by Article 8, paragraphs 1 and 2, of Rule No. 10, in the absence of an equality coefficient taking into account the significant difference between the cost of medical care in the United States and Belgium.

3. Eurocontrol's main argument against these claims is that in the present case Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations and the rules that are in force were correctly applied, and that it complied with the considerations set out by the Tribunal in Judgment 1880.

It recalls that Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations provides that:

"Where the total expenditure not reimbursed for any period of twelve months exceeds half the official's basic monthly salary ... special reimbursement shall be allowed by the Director General ..."

Eurocontrol adds that Article 8(2) of Rule No. 10 fixes the rate of special reimbursement envisaged in Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations. Paragraph 5 of Article 8 of Rule No. 10 stipulates that "[d]ecisions on requests for special reimbursement shall be taken ... on the basis of an opinion delivered by the office responsible for settling claims in accordance with general criteria adopted by the Management Committee after consulting the Medical Council for determining whether the expenses incurred are excessive ...". Lastly, it argues that the provisions for interpretation of Rule No. 10, issued under Article 31 of the Rule, to which reference was made in Judgment 1880, merely specify further the principle set out above to the effect that the special reimbursement is limited to refundable expenses.

It concludes that, in view of these considerations and the reckoning made on the basis of the above criteria, the amount of expenses remaining at the charge of the complainant does not exceed half of his basic monthly salary.

4. The Tribunal recalls that the issue of the special reimbursement under Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations arose when it examined the case giving rise to Judgment 1880. On that occasion, it found that it was premature to rule on the issue in view of the fact that the twelve-month period had not yet been completed. But it also added the following:

"It is only at the end of this period that the Fund will be able, if needs be, to fix the reimbursement of uncovered expenses which could, under these provisions, give rise to a special reimbursement; it shall examine the application of [rules of interpretation] ...; it shall ensure that the interpretation does not rob the original rule - especially Article 72(3) - of its meaning."

5. There is no need to entertain again the pleas which were examined in Judgment 1880 and on which the Tribunal has already ruled. It only remains to rule on the granting of a special reimbursement under paragraph 3 of Article 72 for the period from 8 September 1998 to 7 September 1999.

6. Eurocontrol's whole argument in refusing the special reimbursement relies essentially on its interpretation of Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations and the provisions issued thereunder.

In its submission, the "non-reimbursed expenses' must be understood as the portion of refundable medical expenses under the rules which have remained at the charge of the insured person (15% or 20%, as appropriate), and not the total of non-reimbursed expenses under all heads (excessive costs or expenses not related to medical care)".

As indicated in Judgments 2153 and 2154 also delivered this day, the Tribunal finds that this restrictive interpretation cannot stand. While it is justifiable to set aside expenses not related to medical treatment in determining the expenses which have not been accepted but could be taken into consideration for a special reimbursement, the same does not hold for all expenses considered to be excessive. This would rob of its meaning the basic provision of Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations.

7. The upshot of this, and of the considerations in Judgment 2153, to which reference is made as needs be in the present Judgment, is that the impugned decision, which rejected the complainant's internal complaint relating to the special reimbursement of the medical expenses incurred for the period from 8 September 1998 to 7 September 1999, based on an erroneous interpretation of the relevant texts, must be set aside.

8. The Agency shall therefore reckon the complainant's average monthly salary for the above period and take into account the portion of expenditure incurred and not reimbursed during that period, except for expenses not related to medical care, in determining whether the complainant may be entitled to the special reimbursement envisaged under Article 72(3) of the Staff Regulations.

9. The complainant is entitled to costs, which are set at 1,000 euros.

DECISION

For the above reasons,

1. The impugned decision is set aside.

2. The Agency shall proceed as indicated under 8 above in determining whether the complainant is entitled to a special reimbursement for the period from 8 September 1998 to 7 September 1999.

3. It shall pay the complainant 1,000 euros in costs.
