Advancing the Decent Work Agenda in North Africa ▶▶▶

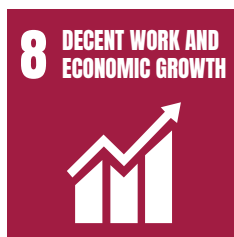

The ADWA' project works at the policy-making level in order to support evidence-based decisions on key dimensions of the Decent Work Agenda. The project strategy builds on an analysis of key stakeholders and change agents that need to be effectively engaged with to achieve the expected results.

The project covers three countries: Egypt, Morocco, and Tunisia

The project aims to promote job-rich growth, International Labour Standards (ILS) and their application at enterprise level with a specific focus on gender and climate change. These elements are fundamental for the economic development of the region and are essential to advance towards the realization of the Sustainable Development Goals.
