Introducing our speakers

The African Development Forum is the flagship biennial event of the Economic Commission for Africa, designed to offer a multi-stakeholder platform for discussing and initiating concrete strategies for Africa’s development.

The theme of the ADF IX is “Innovative financing for Africa’s transformation”. It will offer a platform for prominent African stakeholders to participate in in-depth discussions across five thematic areas: Domestic Resource Mobilization; Illicit Financial Flows; Private Equity; New forms of partnership; Climate Financing.

The programme is geared towards delivering clear outcomes and new ideas. The format of the event will be Davos’ style, with interactive panels and Q&As aimed at generating engaging discussions.

Our speakers are active stakeholders and experts in their fields; they have been selected for their in-depth knowledge and relevant experience in the issues that the Forum aims to tackle.

Please Note:
The speakers are organised in the same order of the Ninth African Development Forum programme, as it stands in the printed brochure in your delegate pack. All details correct at time of print. Some panels may be incomplete, due to the bios and photos being unavailable at time of print.

Host

Dr. Carlos Lopes
Executive Secretary of ECA

Dr Carlos Lopes
Secrétaire exécutif, CEA

Dr. Carlos Lopes was appointed by Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon as the eighth Executive Secretary of the Economic Commission for Africa, at the level of UN Under Secretary-General, in September 2012. He previously served as Executive Director of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) in Geneva and Director of the UN System Staff College in Turin at the level of Assistant Secretary-General from March 2007 to August 2012. Dr. Lopes has actively contributed to research on development issues. Specialized in development and strategic planning, he has authored or edited 22 books and taught at various academic institutions. He is affiliated with a number of academic networks, and has helped establish various non-governmental organizations and centres for social research, in particular in Africa.

Following his service in the public sector of his native Guinea-Bissau in the areas of research, diplomacy and planning, Dr. Lopes joined the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) as a development economist in 1988. While at UNDP, he occupied various positions, including Deputy Director at the Office of Evaluation and Strategic Planning, as well as Deputy, and later Director of the New York-based Bureau for Development Policy. He also managed UNDP's global programme, with a portfolio of $1 billion. He served as United Nations Resident Coordinator and UNDP Resident Representative in Zimbabwe and Brazil.

À la suite de sa nomination par le Secrétaire général de l'ONU, M. Carlos Lopes est devenu en septembre 2012 le huitième Secrétaire exécutif de la Commission économique pour l'Afrique, avec rang de Secrétaire général adjoint. Il a auparavant occupé les postes de directeur général de l'Institut des Nations Unies pour la formation et la recherche (UNITAR) à Genève et de directeur de l'École des cadres du système des Nations Unies à Turin, avec le rang de sous-secrétaire général. Avant cela, M. Lopes a été sous-secrétaire général de l'ONU et directeur des affaires politiques au cabinet du Secrétaire général de 2005 à 2007.

M. Lopes a largement contribué à la recherche dans le domaine du développement. Spécialiste du développement et de la planification stratégique, il a écrit ou édité 22 livres et a enseigné dans des universités et institutions académiques à Lisbonne, Coimbra, Zurich, Uppsala, Mexico, São Paulo et Rio de Janeiro. Il appartient à un grand nombre de réseaux académiques et a contribué à la création d'organisations non gouvernementales et d'institutions de recherche en matière de sciences sociales, notamment en Afrique.

Après avoir servi dans la fonction publique de son pays d'origine, la Guinée-Bissau, dans les domaines de la recherche, de la diplomatie et de la planification, M. Lopes a rejoint le Programme des Nations Unies pour le développement (PNUD) en 1988 en tant qu'économiste du développement. Il y a occupé divers postes, dont ceux de Directeur adjoint du Bureau de l'évaluation et de la planification stratégique, de Représentant résident au Zimbabwe, de directeur adjoint et par la suite de Directeur du Bureau des politiques de développement (à New York). M. Lopes a également géré le Programme mondial du PNUD, doté d'une enveloppe budgétaire de 1 milliard de dollars. De plus, il a occupé les fonctions de Coordonnateur résident des Nations Unies et Représentant résident du PNUD au Zimbabwe et au Brésil.
