

Five reasons

Decent Work is a priority of the Sustainable Development Goals

Because work touches everyone

No country is immune to a lack of decent work

670 million jobs is needed by 2030

Because decent work drives development

ILO research shows developing countries that invested in quality jobs

grew faster

Because decent work is what people want

A Gallup World poll ranked access to good jobs

#1 priority

Because decent work transforms societies for the better

Decent Work is a foundation for equitable, inclusive, and sustainable development

Because the quality of jobs, not just the quantity, is at stake

Everyone is entitled to Decent Work
