

Committee on the Application of Standards

Date: 16 May 2022

Governments concerned are invited to submit written information on serious failure to report by 16 May 2022.

► Information on cases of serious failure to respect reporting and other standards-related obligations supplied by governments

Antigua and Barbuda

Failure to submit reports for two years or more and failure to reply to all or most CEACR comments

The Government has provided the following written information.

The Government of Antigua and Barbuda acknowledges its failure to meet its reporting obligations for the past few years. This has been due to the sudden resignation on 8 May 2020 of the Officer who performed the reporting function on behalf of the Government.

As a consequence, and with the kind assistance of the ILO through the International Training Centre, two labour officers are now trained to assume reporting duties. It is also our intention to have a third officer trained in ILO reporting.

Further, the International Labour Standards Specialist in the ILO Office for the Caribbean has graciously offered guidance to ensure that we meet our reporting obligations for the year 2022.
