Millions of people are on the move across all regions of the globe.

The post-2015 UN development agenda provides a unique impetus for renewing global cooperation and coordination on international migration and development and to advance the promotion and protection of the human and labour rights of migrants in accordance with international standards.

This special event will allow participants to discuss some of the practical ways in which the post-2015 development framework might incorporate migrants and migration, which are needed to advance inclusive, equitable and sustainable development.
