As the only tripartite agency of the United Nations, the ILO brings together governments, employers and workers from 187 member states to establish labour standards, develop policies and design programs that promote decent work for women and men.

The Tripartite Declaration of Principles on Multinational Enterprises (MNEs) and Social Policy provides direct guidance to companies (both multinational and national), as well as governments and employers' and workers' organizations on social policy and inclusive work practices, responsible and sustainable.

The Declaration on MNEs is the only global instrument in this area, and the only one that was developed and adopted by governments, employers and workers around the world.

European Union, join forces to promote responsible business conduct within the context with its respective mandate, instruments and experience.

The mission of the OECD is to promote policies that improve the economic and social well-being of people around the world.

The OECD is the author of the main comprehensive international instrument on responsible business conduct: The OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises.

The OECD contribution to the Project will focus on Key areas of corporate responsibility covered in the OECD Guidelines, including human rights, the environment, work and corruption.

The OECD has also adopted a series of instruments that provide guidance to companies on how to implement due diligence in practice. The Guidelines also include a single mechanism for implementation and non-judicial claim: National Contact Points (NCP) for responsible business conduct. Currently 48 countries are adhering to the Guidelines and have PNCs; seven of them are LAC countries.
