Like most countries in the region, Jordan has a low-level HIV epidemic. Between 1986, when the first HIV tests were conducted, and December 2010, a total of 782 HIV cases were reported, of which 230 (29%) were Jordanian citizens, while 552 (71%) were foreigners. As of December 2010, 92 people (40% of all reported cases) had died of AIDS. Out of the total of 230 Jordanian cases, 187 (81%) were men and 43 (19%) were women, which translates into a male-to-female sex ratio of 4:1.

While HIV rates in Jordan are extremely low, a number of potential factors could contribute to the further spread of HIV in the near future. These potential drivers of the HIV epidemic include structural socioeconomic and cultural factors such as poverty and unemployment; regional conflicts and wars; large population movements, including refugees and labour migrants; gender inequality, sexual and gender-based violence, including trafficking of women; and HIV-related stigma and discrimination.

The world of work provides an ideal channel for national responses to HIV and for countering damaging myths surrounding the disease. A country like Jordan, irrespective of its infection rate, can benefit from a comprehensive National HIV/AIDS framework that brings workplace issues into the mainstream, protects against employment-related stigma and discrimination, promotes prevention, treatment and care measures through the workplace and ensures the full participation of all stakeholders.

Furthermore, the Draft National Strategic Framework (NSF) on HIV/AIDS 2012-2016 in Jordan, which is due to be finalized by December 2011, promotes the role of the Ministry of Labour (MoL) to reach most-at-risk adolescents and cooperates with the private sector in establishing workplace programmes for men with higher HIV risk. Additionally, the NSF calls for action to strengthen the involvement of the private sector in workplace HIV interventions and to establish public-private partnerships.

More needs to be done to increase knowledge and sensitize the private sector in applying HIV-friendly policy in the workplace as well as to encourage worker representatives to advocate for the right to work for PLHIV.

Ministry of Labour, Ministry of Health Jordan Chamber of Industry and General Federation of Jordan Trade Union have promoted the development of the National Policy on HIV and AIDS and World of Work. This policy, based on findings from the ILO study “HIV and AIDS and World of Work: analysis and priority setting on law and practice in Jordan”, is in line with ILO Recommendation No. 200. This document is a milestone in Jordan to promote and facilitate the role of world of work stakeholders to support the national AIDS response. The policy is in the process of being endorsed by the competent national authorities.

In light of the above, this proposal presents a platform for a preliminary discussion on the role of the Tourism sector in the Jordan AIDS response and to promote HIV/AIDS workplace initiatives in accordance to the National Policy on HIV and AIDS and the World of Work.
Recommendation, 2010 (No. 200)

The HIV and AIDS Recommendation, 2010 (No. 200) adopted on 17 June 2010 at the 99th Session of the International Labour Conference, takes a rights-based approach to the pandemic. It establishes that the workplace should play a role in the HIV response and calls for the adoption of national workplace policies and programmes on HIV and AIDS to facilitate access to HIV prevention, treatment, care and support services.

In this context, the delegates representing the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan participated in the 99th Session of the International Labour Conference and supported the adoption of the HIV and AIDS Recommendation.
