Overview

1. The Infodemic: Pandemic of Mis/Disinformation
2. How Media and Journalists Adapt to New Normal
3. The Way Forward: Anticipation and Understanding

“We’re not just fighting an epidemic; we’re fighting an infodemic”, said WHO Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus at the Munich Security Conference on Feb 15.

Protokol Keamanan Liputan & Pemberitaan COVID-19

Organisasi Kesehatan Dunia telah menyatakan COVID-19 sebagai pandemi, dan Indonesia merupakan salah satu negara yang terpapar dengan jumlah kasus dan korban jiwa terus bertambah. Di tengah situasi krisis ini, media sangat dibutuhkan untuk memberikan informasi yang akurat dan mendidik ke publik, selain juga melakukan tugas sebagai watchdog untuk mengawal penanggulangan krisis dengan baik. Namun di sisi lain, pekerja media, khususnya yang bertugas di lapangan, termasuk yang sangat rentan terpapar penyakit yang dipicu infeksi virus korona baru (SARS-CoV-2) ini dan bisa menjadi penular ke orang lain,

Kematian dua orang jurukamera – Muhammad Guntur Syaifullah dari SCTV, dan Suherman dari Lativi – ketika mereka meliput kebakaran kapal Levina I awal Februari, membuka mata masyarakat pers mengenai buruknya persiapan jurnalis ketika meliput lingkungan berbahaya.

Setiap tahun, ketika sebuah perusahaan merayakan ulang tahunnya, pemimpin perusahaan bersangkutan biasanya menyampaikan pidato yang membawa angin surga kepada karyawannya. Termasuk di antaranya, pernyataan bahwa bagi perusahaan, karyawan merupakan aset yang terpenting dan tak ternilai harganya. Tapi angin surga itu biasanya berhenti pada

Challenges for Covid-19 Working Setting for Journalists

- Physical distancing make it difficult for journalist to meet interviewee in person only via online methods
- Most events are held online, make it more challenging for journalists to get deeper information or background information to explain what really happened
- The pandemic situation where media companies are facing economy problems and loss of family and friends made journalists more vulnerable to mental health issues.
- Not so many companies realize the importance of mental health condition of their workers.
- Journalists who still have to go out to the field risk of getting covid-19 infection. Not all antigen test are reliable

Occupational Safety and Health Issues in Indonesia related to Covid-19

- Many publication in the media has not link the OSH issues with Covid-19 pandemic because media tend to focus on govt campaign for physical distancing and not yet focus on gradually back to new normal.
- Health protocol is seen more as a general responsibility of the employers imposed by government but not yet as private responsibility of companies to their employees. So not only there is no proper law enforcement, no one is really looking at the issue
- In general, media and the public's perspective is that Covid-19 will end sometime, maybe in 2022, not as an endemic situation where we have to adapt to a new normal.

AMSI Program for Covid-19 related OSH

- Campaigning and providing access for mental health monitoring and Covid-19 related OSH amongst AMSI members
- Formulating and establishing standard of procedures for journalists and media workers to safely work in Covid-19 working situation or new normal
- Discussing a new framework where Covid-19 is seen as an endemic health issue that will require adaptation of new normal procedures including OSH.
