LABOUR ADMINISTRATION

Labour administration and labour inspection. Report V

The report discusses the main characteristics of labour administration and labour inspection and other key instruments and sets out their prospects for further ratification, particularly in the light of these promotional activities adopted by the Governing Body in November 2009 for those standards considered most significant from the viewpoint of governance, including Conventions Nos 81 and 129.

SAFETY SECURITY

Social security and the rule of law. General survey concerning social security instruments in light of the 2008 declaration on social justice for a fair globalization.

Surveying the legacy of the social security standards adopted in the 1950s and 1960s, the Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations (CEACR) observes that there is now a clear need for the adopted of new complementary approaches to help guide the future policy choices of ILO constituents.

SOCIAL DIALOGUE

Tripartite responses to the economic crisis in the principal Western European countries

An analysis of the diversity of national responses may be facilitated by using a simplified typology that divides countries. In some countries with strong tripartite traditions, institutions initially played a positive role, making it possible to arrive at balanced compromises. They are then subject to growing tensions which threatened to endanger their capacity for regulation unless there was a quick end to the crisis.

Restructuring enterprises through social dialogue: socially responsible practices in times of crisis

The paper focuses on labour-management restructuring agreements that are aimed at protecting the levels, as well as the terms and conditions, of employment in specific plants (plant-level agreements) or across all operations of the company (transnational company agreements – TCAs), while at the same time cutting or maintaining operating costs, for as long as possible given the situation of the company.

Export processing zones: comparative data from China, Honduras, Nicaragua, and South Africa

This paper compares the experiences of export processing zones (EPZ) in four countries: China, South Africa, Honduras, and Nicaragua. The report covers issues regarding the impact of EPZs on national economies, the legal the regulation of labour and the social protection of workers, the state of social dialogue, the impact of the global economic crisis, and an assessment of similar enterprises within and outside EPZs. Through comparison, the report is able to assess the particular outcomes about EPZs in different national contexts.

Tripartite institutions, collective bargaining and employment relations in the Mauritian labour market

The paper begins with a profile of the economy and the labour market, showing how developments in the former impacts on institutions and employment relations. It examines the recent fundamental reforms of the labour code and shows how key improvements are bound to enhance the rights and role of workers in labour market governance.

Tripartite cooperation, labour market reform and economic upturn in Singapore

The paper presents an account of the institutional framework for social dialogue and tripartite consultation in Singapore, and its contribution to labour market reforms, particularly in addressing the impact of the global crisis on jobs and livelihood in the country. It outlines the successful experience of tripartite partnership based on social dialogue, with the central goal of contributing to socio-economic development and national prosperity, including effective crisis recovery responses.

Gender equality and social dialogue in South Africa

This study provides valuable information on legal and institutional frameworks for promotion of social dialogue and gender equality in South Africa. Despite the impressive legislative basis, gender-based inequalities still exist in the society and at the workplace. Most women, making up nearly half the labour force, remain in poorly paid jobs, particularly domestic workers.
