VALUE CHAIN

Value Chain Development
Approaches and activities by seven UN agencies and opportunities for interagency cooperation

Value chain development: approaches and activities by seven UN agencies and opportunities for inter-agency cooperation

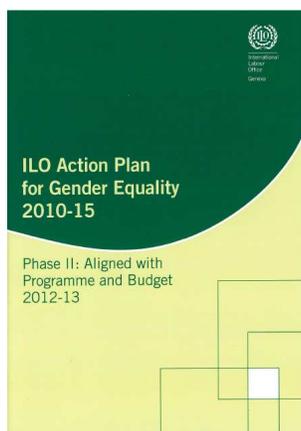

In recognition of the increasing importance of value chain approaches in development, experts from seven UN agencies met in July 2010 in Geneva to explore how the UN could enhance the effectiveness of its work on value chain development and improve coordination and collaboration across agencies within the spirit of UN Reform and "Delivering as One".

MIGRATION

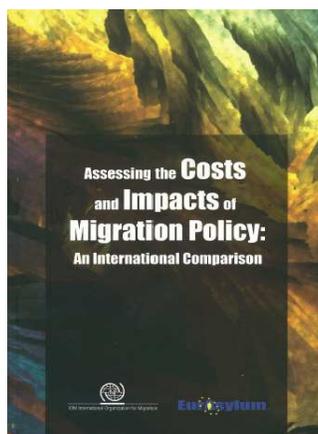

The global economic and migration: where do we go from here?

The book was written while the recession was still unfolding and in its immediate aftermath. The book discusses the world economic background that shaped the recent recession and explains the dynamics and ramifications of the crisis. The discussion seeks to discern its effects on jobs, wages, and workforces, including trends in poverty and inequality worldwide.

Publisher: International Organization for Migration (IOM)

Assessing the costs and impacts of migration policy: an international comparison

The book promotes a better understanding of the complex challenges that policymakers face when they seek to assess the impact of migration programmes. Another key aim is to promote a better exchange of information between countries about current policy evaluation approaches and methodologies.

Publishers: IOM and EurASYLUM

International migration and migrant workers' remittances in Indonesia: findings of baseline surveys of migrant remitters and remittance beneficiary households

The study reviews the migration and the remittance scenario in Indonesia through a development lens. Indonesian workers abroad send home the fruits of their hard work to improve the lives of their family members and to contribute to the local economy through investments.

Publishers: IOM, Economic Resource Center for Overseas Filipinos (ERCOF), and European Union (EU)

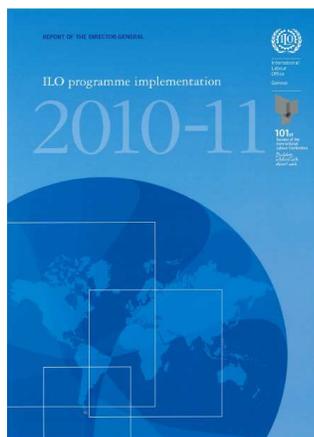

Women and migration: the mental health nexus. A research on individual and structural determinants of stress and mental health problems of Filipino women migrant domestic workers

The study is a pioneering effort to further enrich our knowledge of the psychosocial dimensions of overseas domestic work.
