Independent evaluation of the ILO's field operations and structure 2010-2016

This high-level evaluation assesses the performance of the ILO's field operations and structure, given the Decent Work Agenda in particular but also the 2030 Agenda, and ongoing reform in the UN development system in view of the Sustainable Development Goals. The evaluation identifies recommendations for improving the ILO's field structure and operations and reflects on lessons learned and emerging good practice.

Independent evaluation of the ILO's strategy and actions for creating and extending social protection floors, 2012-2017

The ILO's work on social protection is relevant at both the global and country/regional levels. The strong focus on the global agenda to achieve more outreach and impact is justified and has high strategic relevance, as reflected in the position that universal social protection has assumed in the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and in the Global Partnership on Universal Social Protection (USP 2030).

Annual evaluation report 2016-17

The report reflects on the ILO's effectiveness and the progress made in implementing the ILO's extended evaluation strategy (2011-17) as measured against its three outcomes: (a) improved use of evaluation by ILO constituents and management for governance; (b) harmonized office-wide evaluation practice to support transparency and accountability; and (c) evaluation capability expanded through enhanced knowledge, skills and tools.

Independent evaluation of the ILO's decent work country programme strategies and actions in the Mekong subregion, 2012-2017

ILO decent work country programmes (DWCPs) are the primary framework for delivering support to member countries in an effort to promote decent work as a key national development strategy. This high-level evaluation assesses the extent to which the ILO's DWCPs, strategies and actions that were delivered in the Mekong subregion from 2012-17 achieved their expected results. It also identifies recommendations, lessons learned and emerging good practices in order to contribute to organizational learning by informing future DWCPs and strategies.
