Preparing for the future of work: National policy responses in ASEAN +6. Annex 1: Labour markets and technological change

While Australia has its Digital Economy Strategy, it does not have an explicit Industry 4.0 strategy. In April 2016, the government announced the formation of an Industry 4.0 Taskforce composed of business leaders and academics and it pursued as one of its initial tasks, cooperation between Australian and German industry leaders for collaboration on Industry 4.0.

Preparing for the future of work: National policy responses in ASEAN +6. Annex 3: Labour markets and climate change

The Philippine Green Jobs Act (PGJA) of 2016 is a legislation that clearly links climate change and labour market outcomes. It defines green jobs as "employment that contributes to preserving or restoring the quality of environment, be it in agriculture, industry, or services sector".

Workers' guide to employment and decent work for peace and resilience: Recommendation (No. 205)

The guide provides information and guidance on how trade unions can ensure the implementation of this new global tool to their advantage. It is intended as a reference to workers organizations on the provisions of Recommendation No. 205. It offers examples and concrete suggestions on how workers' organizations can support the generation of employment and decent work for the purpose of prevention, recovery, peace, and resilience.

Securing the competitiveness of Asia's garment sector: A framework for enhancing factory-level productivity

This paper establishes the need for productivity interventions in the Asian ready-made garment sector. It argues the rationale for addressing factory productivity as part of a wider strategy including an integrated approach to securing the sector's future competitiveness and long-term sustainability. It further proposes a conceptual framework to assist in the design of future interventions targeting productivity improvements.
