Small matters: Global evidence on the contribution to employment by the self-employed, micro-enterprises and SMEs

The report provides an up-to-date and realistic assessment of the contribution of self-employment and micro- and small enterprises (hereafter referred to as "small economic units") to employment – both in the formal and the informal economy – across the globe. The estimates presented here are based on data from household, labour and other statistical surveys conducted in a representative set of 99 countries between 2009 and 2018.

Managing conflicts and disasters: Exploring collaboration between employers' and workers'

This publication looks at the role that employers and workers, through their respective organizations, play in crisis situations arising from conflict and disaster. The report importantly examines how EBMOs and workers' organizations have collaborated through social dialogue and other means of collective action to promote peace, prevent crises, enable recovery and build resilience.

Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and employment policies in the Philippines

In order to support ILO constituents in their efforts to maximize and track progress on SDG8, a multi-country research programme has been undertaken that diagnoses opportunities and challenges associated with promoting productive employment and that identifies policy options for achieving SDG8.

Organizing matters: Two logics of trade union representation

The book investigates the tensions and potential complementarities in an extensive qualitative case study of trade union organizing and recruitment in four countries – Austria, Germany, Israel and the Netherlands. These countries still utilize social-wide bargaining but find it necessary to draw and develop strategies transposed from Anglo-American countries in response to continuously declining membership.
