

Strengthening Resilience through Social Protection

8 July 2015 • 10:00am - 12noon

Conference Room 11, UN HQ, New York

The unprecedented shock around the world following the Ebola virus disease (EVD) has rung alarm bells that all societies need a minimum social protection system and accessible public infrastructures for social services. Guinea, Liberia and Sierre Leone are no exception.

The side event will address the wake-up call and opportunity presented by the post-ebola recovery plans if efforts are coherent and grounded into societies with respect of social justice where each individual has the means for a life in dignity at all stages through the life cycle and irrespective of where he/she comes from.
