Ensuring wide ownership.

As amended (or rejected) by the ICLS. There is a tradition of decisions being taken by consensus, by ICLS Committees. The Committees’ proposals are further debated at the plenary and adopted for the others. The draft resolutions or guidelines are discussed in detail and amended (if necessary) each of the main topics (containing a draft resolution or guidelines proposal) and a general report. The ILO Department of Statistics drafts the reports that will guide the work of the ICLS: one report for each topic of the ICLS agenda. Based on the topics identified, the ILO Department of Statistics conducts thorough methodological research, analysis, and consultations to draft initial proposals of resolutions and/or guidelines.

The ICLS brings together experts in labour statistics from governments. Based on this process, the agenda for the ICLS is decided and approved by the ILO. We develop international standards for better measurement of labour issues and enhanced possibilities of improving it. Timely, valid, relevant, reliable, and comprehensive labour statistics are necessary to inform the design, implementation and monitoring of policies, as well as research, analysis, and decisions by all actors of the world of work. Since it is continuously evolving, it needs to be kept up-to-date, allowing the ICLS to adjust and improve it. We anticipate that digital platform employment is still relatively low in many countries, the number of digital platforms and work relationships.

The ICLS is an extraordinary forum in which the world of work is represented. It is a unique platform for sharing knowledge, and fostering meaningful connections within the field. It has served as a platform for sharing cutting-edge research, innovative ideas, and best practices that have propelled our field forward. It has served as a platform for sharing cutting-edge research, innovative ideas, and best practices that have propelled our field forward. The centenary celebration of the ICLS is an extraordinary opportunity for us to reflect on the remarkable achievements and contributions that its members and representatives from around the world have made to the field of international labour statistics. The ICLS has served as a beacon of excellence, fostering meaningful connections within the field. It has served as a platform for sharing cutting-edge research, innovative ideas, and best practices that have propelled our field forward. The centenary celebration of the ICLS is an extraordinary opportunity for us to reflect on the remarkable achievements and contributions that its members and representatives from around the world have made to the field of international labour statistics.

As we reflect on the journey that has led us to this, it is with immense gratitude that we acknowledge the vigorous work and dedication of our constituents in advancing decent work and social justice for all. Over the past 100 years, the ICLS has evolved into a beacon of excellence, representing best practices in the respective areas. Once adopted by the ICLS, they are then presented to the ILO Governing Body to become international standards. The ICLS is an extraordinary forum, where the world of work is represented. It is a unique platform for sharing knowledge, and fostering meaningful connections within the field. It has served as a platform for sharing cutting-edge research, innovative ideas, and best practices that have propelled our field forward. The centenary celebration of the ICLS is an extraordinary opportunity for us to refl ect on the remarkable achievements and contributions that its members and representatives from around the world have made to the field of international labour statistics.

Based on the topics identified, the ILO Department of Statistics conducts thorough methodological research, analysis, and consultations to draft initial proposals of resolutions and/or guidelines. The ICLS brings together experts in labour statistics from all over the world, from governments, workers’ and employers’ organizations. Based on this process, the agenda for the ICLS is decided and approved by the ILO. We develop international standards for better measurement of labour issues and enhanced possibilities of improving it. Timely, valid, relevant, reliable, and comprehensive labour statistics are necessary to inform the design, implementation and monitoring of policies, as well as research, analysis, and decisions by all actors of the world of work. Since it is continuously evolving, it needs to be kept up-to-date, allowing the ICLS to adjust and improve it. We anticipate that digital platform employment is still relatively low in many countries, the number of digital platforms and work relationships.

The ICLS is an extraordinary forum, where the world of work is represented. It is a unique platform for sharing knowledge, and fostering meaningful connections within the field. It has served as a platform for sharing cutting-edge research, innovative ideas, and best practices that have propelled our field forward. The centenary celebration of the ICLS is an extraordinary opportunity for us to refl ect on the remarkable achievements and contributions that its members and representatives from around the world have made to the field of international labour statistics.