

Getting involved.

Membership

As a business-only network membership is open to firms of all size and sector, as well as Employer’s and Business Membership Organizations (EBMO) including industry trade groups and sectoral associations. Membership terms are for 12 months with subsequent years subject to appraisal.

Large Companies	SME Companies	EBMOS
Enterprises with more than 250 employees or revenue more than 25 million USD. This includes both domestic and multinational enterprises.	Enterprises with 10 to 250 employees and revenue less than 25 million USD.	Employers’ and business membership organizations operating in all geographies, sectors and points in supply chains.
Entry requirements—12 month membership
USD 10,000 membership fee for the first year processed through Public Private Partnership (PPP) agreement with the ILO.	Membership fee waived for the first year in exchange for a completed profile and an expression of support from existing member of the Global Business Network or an apex Employers Organization.	Membership fee waived for the first year in exchange for commitments of in-kind support.

MEMBERSHIP BENEFITS

1. Access to a members-only forum for connecting with socially engaged firms, leading business initiatives, and SME deep in supply chains;
2. Receive support to navigate the complex landscape of actors, mechanisms, and resources to tackle forced labour and human trafficking across different regulatory landscapes and supply chains;
3. Access to a growing suite of knowledge products and tools on effective models for human rights’ due diligence, collaboration and work with SMEs in supply chains;
4. Exclusive invitations to participate in technical meetings and webinars to explore the barriers and success factors for action to become cross-cutting and achieve scale, such as the importance of collaboration and alliances;
5. Opportunities to learn from and join issue-related events hosted by Members of the Global Business Network in different sectors and geographies;
6. Opportunities for direct partnership with ILO through technical work to deliver solutions on the ground;
7. Receive regular briefings and insights shared by the Global Business Network, including updates on Members activities and report-back on progress against the objectives set;
8. On boarding services including a 30 minute call with new members to orient them to the activities of the Global Business Network and the ILOs broader work on these issues;
9. Eligibility to join the Steering Committee, lead Advisory Councils and participate in Working Groups for a direct say in the directions pursued and how work is prioritized.

For more information

The ILO serves as the secretariat for the Global Business Network on Forced Labour and facilitates its activities. Any enquiries can be directed to fl-businessnetwork@ilo.org