Dear Reader,

This month, in the framework of the annual Geneva Peace Week, the ILO organized a panel discussion examining preliminary results from the implementation of the Jobs for Peace and Resilience \(JPR\) Global Flagship Programme in selected countries. During the course of the event, panellists discussed the value added of decent work and employment creation in reinforcing social cohesion, building peace and ensuring resilience to future shocks in crisis-affected countries. The UN Special Envoy on Syria, Mr. Staffan de Mistura, opened the event highlighting the importance of employment in the humanitarian and peacebuilding nexus.

See below for additional information related to the event, including an article and impact stories.

Do youth employment programs improve labor market outcomes? A quantitative review.

Bringing young people into productive work is a key labour market challenge in both developing and developed economies, and a multitude of labour market interventions have been implemented to assist vulnerable youth. To assess whether these interventions have succeeded in improving young people's labour market outcomes, this study systematically and quantitatively reviews 113 impact evaluations of youth employment programs worldwide. The article is co-authored by the ILO's Youth Employment Specialists Susana Puerto and Felix Weidenkaff. (Published in World Development Journal, Volume 114, 2019) Read more

Policy brief on skills for migration and employment.

This policy brief explains why action is needed to improve skills development in the context of migration. It also outlines what skills development and recognition can do to facilitate the labour market integration of migrants, both in destination countries and on returning to their home countries. ### Job creation for Syrian refugees and host communities: Employment Intensive Investment strategies in Jordan and Lebanon.

This policy paper presents an overview of the approach promoted by the ILO in Jordan and Lebanon to support the Government in creating immediate job opportunities for Syrian women and men refugees and members of their host communities, while also improving local infrastructure and the environment. Read more

Structural transformation in emerging economies: Leading sectors and the balanced growth hypothesis.

The paper uses the World Input-Output Database to address patterns of structural transformation in BRIC countries, and Indonesia, South Korea, Mexico and Turkey. It goes on to assess the extent of complementarities between manufacturing and information and communications technology-intensive advanced services through intermediate inputs, comparing the eight emerging countries with G7 countries over time. (Published online in the Oxford Development Studies Journal, Oct. 2018). Read more

Measuring the non-financial benefits of apprenticeships.

The report details field research in South Africa involving enterprises that participated in face-to-face interviews and completed an online survey to report on the non-financial benefits that accrue to them from participating in apprenticeship schemes. While a number of studies in different countries have considered the issue of financial benefits, few studies have attempted to report on non-financial or non-marketable benefits, especially in low- and middle-income countries. This study fills that gap. (Forthcoming, December 2018).

Skills and jobs mismatches in low and middle-income countries.

The book brings together a number of research outputs produced by the ILO in 2017 under the Global Product on Jobs and Skills Mismatch. It compiles for the first time analyses of different data sets to consider the question of skills mismatch in low and middle-income countries. (Forthcoming, December 2018).

The Global Education Meeting 2018. 3-5 December. Brussels, Belgium.

The Global Meeting is convened by UNESCO in its mandated role as lead agency and coordinator of the Education 2030 Agenda. The Meeting will review progress towards the global education targets and commitments in the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. It will bring the global community together to identify strategic priority areas requiring political guidance and intervention for the effective achievement of the global Education 2030 Agenda. For the event, the ILO's Employment Department is providing support: a jointly hosted technical session on TVET and skills development and youth employment with UNESCO, and a technical session on the teaching profession co-hosted with Education International. In addition, Sangheon Lee, representing the Director-General, will be participating in a high-level technical discussion on learning and the future of work. Read more
