Mr Francis Blanchard

1. The Director-General announces with deep regret the death on 9 December 2009 of Mr Francis Blanchard, Director-General of the ILO from 1974 to 1989.

2. Born in Paris on 21 July 1916, Francis Blanchard held degrees from the Faculty of Law and from the École Libre des Sciences Politiques. He began his career in the French administration, but switched to the international civil service shortly thereafter, joining the International Refugee Organisation (IRO) at the age of 31. In 1951 he took up a post with the ILO as Deputy Chief of the Manpower Division, in which capacity he was involved in the ILO’s initial technical cooperation activities. In this position, as in the others he subsequently held, he placed his energy, his immense capacity for work and his sense of diplomacy at the service of an expanding Organization. Francis Blanchard was appointed Assistant Director-General in 1956, then Deputy Director-General in 1968, until he became Director-General of the ILO in 1974.

3. When Francis Blanchard assumed leadership of the Organization, it was going through a period of great difficulties, which were aggravated by the cold war; he met the challenges with courage and determination. His vision of the ILO was ambitious and deeply rooted in the ideals of peace, justice, freedom and dialogue. The first crisis he had to face was the budgetary crisis resulting from the withdrawal of the United States, the ILO’s main contributor, from the Organization. Through his energy and tact, he managed to avert serious damage to the ILO and to create the right conditions for a speedy return of the United States. With the same conviction and faith in the relevance of the ILO’s work, the Director-General was always among the first to defend fundamental rights at work, freedom of association and democracy, whether in Poland, Argentina, South Africa, Portugal, Tunisia, Spain or Chile. In 1981, Lech Walesa was given a resounding welcome by the International Labour Conference. In 1982 it received Pope John Paul II.

4. The 15 years during which Francis Blanchard headed the ILO were marked by burgeoning intellectual activity. He anticipated future challenges and prepared the ILO to meet them, and was one of the first to emphasize the need for coherence and convergence between the policies and activities of the different international organizations. With exceptional acumen with remarkable managerial skills, Francis Blanchard won the respect of States, trade unions, employers and ILO staff alike. As a result of his efforts to disseminate the ILO’s ideals and principles, he left it a reinvigorated Organization at the end of his last term in 1989, after 38 years of service.

5. A social republican and a man of conviction, Francis Blanchard remained deeply attached to the ILO after his retirement and continued to keep abreast of its activities. He was passionately interested in the Decent Work Agenda and the ILO Declaration on Social Justice for a Fair Globalization, adopted by the International Labour Conference in June 2008. He was seated at the podium of the Conference in June 2009, during the visit of the President of the French Republic, Mr Nicolas Sarkozy, who paid him a warm tribute.

6. The Governing Body will no doubt wish to invite the Director-General to convey its sincere condolences to the family of Mr Francis Blanchard and to the Government of France.
Mr Philippe Séguin

7. The Director-General announces with great regret the death, on 7 January 2010, of Mr Philippe Séguin, former representative of France on the ILO Governing Body and its former Chairperson.

8. Philippe Séguin was born on 21 April 1943 in Tunis. After studying for an arts degree at Aix-en-Provence University in France, he entered the Institute of Political Studies and later the prestigious National School of Administration (ENA), from which he graduated in 1970. A man of action and conviction, he went on to pursue a long career in the service of the State. Philippe Séguin joined the Court of Accounts as an auditor; he remained there until 1977, with a break from 1973 to 1975, when he became involved in politics. A member of the RPR (“Rally for the Republic”), he was appointed to serve in various ministerial offices, and in 1978 was elected as a Deputy for Vosges, an office he held until 2002. In the National Assembly, he directed his energy and talents as an orator to the service of causes dear to him. In this respect, his speech supporting the abolition of the death penalty remained in all memories as a high point of parliamentary passion and eloquence. In March 1986, Philippe Séguin was appointed Minister of Social Affairs and Employment. His tenure, which lasted for two years, was particularly characterized by his action to improve social dialogue.

9. In 1992, Philippe Séguin took a new recognized position in the French and European debate around the Maastricht Treaty. In 1993, he became president of the National Assembly, and in 1997 he assumed the leadership of the RPR, a post he relinquished in April 1999. In 2002, he returned to the Court of Accounts after an absence of 25 years, and in 2004 was appointed its President. In this post, as in every post he held, he gave his all, and, thanks to his remarkable working capacity and exacting standards combined with rigour and integrity, he brought the institution renewed prominence.

10. In June 2002, Philippe Séguin was appointed to represent the French Government on the ILO’s Governing Body, serving as its Chairperson from 2004 to 2005. During his term of office, he defended the ILO’s message and activities with conviction and flair. Many of the Organization’s core values of equity, justice, dialogue and human dignity were very much his own. Philippe Séguin was one of the first to confront the challenge of globalization and was convinced of the ILO’s role in regulating globalization. To that end, he energetically supported the recommendations of the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization. Everyone who encountered him in the Governing Body or had the privilege of working with him will remember him as a man of exceptional personality, well-rounded and passionate, driven by deep social convictions.

11. Philippe Séguin was a friend of the ILO: after his departure from the Governing Body, he continued to follow with interest the Organization’s action. He had participated in April 2009 in the celebration of the ILO’s 90th anniversary at the Senate in Paris, and attended the 98th Session of the International Labour Conference in June 2009 alongside the President of France, Mr Nicolas Sarkozy.

12. The Governing Body will no doubt wish to invite the Director-General to convey its sincere condolences to the family of Mr Philippe Séguin and to the Government of France.
