

International Labour Organization

Social protection floor: A UN Joint crisis initiative

ADB Regional Conference on Enhancing Social Protection in Asia and Pacific Region
21-22 April 2010, Manila

Valérie Schmitt

Social security specialist, ILO Bangkok

Structure of the presentation

- I. Social security is a human right, a social and economic necessity, a stabilizer in times of crisis ...
- II. However the coverage is still low worldwide
- III. The UN CEB Social protection floor initiative as a response to the crisis
- IV. The SPF is affordable and feasible, as shown by many country experiences
- V. What can we do to support the Social Protection Floor?
 - a) Global level
 - b) Country level

I- Social security is a human right, a social and economic necessity, a stabilizer in times of crisis...

- A human right:

- The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948), recognizes that: Article 22: Everyone, as a member of society, has the right to social security, and Article 25: Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and of his family

- The International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (1966), 160 UN Member States ... « recognize the right of everyone to social security, including social insurance » (Article 9)
- One area of social security (access to health) is adressed by a specific right: the right to health

I- Social security is a human right, a social and economic necessity, a stabilizer in times of crisis...

- A social necessity since economic and social shocks may have devastating effects at individuals' level in the absence of social protection (poverty, lower access to productive activities, lower health status, child labour ...)
- An economic necessity
 - Those countries that have been the most successful in achieving long-term sustainable growth and poverty reduction have all put in place extensive systems of social security at an early stage).
 - Income transfers through social security have a powerful effect on the income inequality and poverty in developing countries.

I- Social security is a human right, a social and economic necessity, a stabilizer in times of crisis...

- Social security systems are powerful social and economic stabilizers in case of crisis
 - They cushion the impact of economic downturn on workers and their families (affected by Unemployment and Under-Employment) thus contributing to social stability.
 - They also support aggregate domestic demand in times when external demand contracts due to reduced economic activity, and thus facilitate recovery.
 - Lessons learned from past crises: countries that had effective and efficient social security systems in place before a crisis hit were much better equipped to cope with its fallout than those who had not had the foresight to put such systems into place.

II- ... However the coverage is still low worldwide

Health protection: Proportion of the population covered by law, latest available year (percentages)

SOURCE: (ILO, 2010)World Social Security Report
Providing coverage in the time of crisis and beyond
Preliminary version, 15 March 2010

II- ... However the coverage is still low worldwide

Old-age pension beneficiaries (C and NC) as a percentage of the population above retirement age, latest available year

SOURCE: (ILO, 2010) World Social Security Report
Providing coverage in the time of crisis and beyond
Preliminary version, 15 March 2010

II- ... However the coverage is still low worldwide

Existence of unemployment protection schemes by type of scheme, 2008–09

SOURCE: (ILO, 2010) World Social Security Report
Providing coverage in the time of crisis and beyond
Preliminary version, 15 March 2010

